Senate Asked To Determine TVA's Worth To Consumer

Storm Is Loosed Upon the New Deal Project on Three Fronts.

Lilienthal Calls Willkie Plan for U. S. Purchase a 'Radical Scheme.'

By Sidney Olson.

The gathering storm about the Tennessee Valley Authority, focal point of the long, bitter New Deal battle with the utilities, began to break yesterday in three sectors.

On the Senate floor Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire, smashed oratorically at the TVO for more than an hour width the charge that it benefited large corporations more than consumers, and insisted upon a thoroughgoing investigation.

At the White House, David Lilienthal, a TVA director, gave reporters a statement, which he later presented to the President, asserting the TVA is willing to negotiate for "useful physical assets" of Commonwealth and Southern Corporation's Tennessee Valley properties.

Willingness Qualified.

But Lilienthal vigorously qualified this willingness with insistence the TVA has "no authority nor has it any intention to pay for water or write-ups" in those companies.

He characterized as a "radical scheme" the suggestion by Wendell L. Willkie, president of Commonwealth and Southern, that the Government buy the properties outright as a solution to the "desperate" situation.

Willkie, in answer, asserted Lilienthal's proposal that the companies resume negotiations with municipalities in order to sell them distribution systems, would mean a "tremendous loss" to the utility investors.

Norris Fails to Appear.

Senator George W. Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, who beat TVA opponents in the Senate to the jump by himself asking the investigation of TVA on the first day of this session, did not appear in the Senate to answer Bridges' sweeping charges. It is believed he will reply, however.

Lilienthal's forthright statement said of Willkie's proposal for Federal purchase of his Tennessee Valley companies:

"He seeks to justify such a proposal upon the ground that only in this way can investors in these companies be saved from destruction. The public is told that this is the 'last resort' in a desperate situation.'

"The facts show that there is no such crisis as he described."

Business Rise Cited.

He then said each of Willkie's Southern companies did "substantially more business last year than in 1933, when TVA was created; every one of his companies had more net earnings last year than in 1933." He noted that the Tennessee Electric Power Co., "in the very heart of the TVA area, increased its net earnings after charges for the 12 months ended November 30, 1937, over the year 1936 by 13 per cent; these net earnings were 34 per cent greater than in 1933."

Sarcastically, Lilienthal asserted Willkie "for years now has pre-

THE PROBLEMS OF

—and the outlook

From Poland, Russia, Germany, Persia and other countries, thousands of Jews have swarmed into the Holy Land to make it "the Jewish national home." One of their problems is that they speak different languages. In a series of four articles starting in The Post today, C. Poznanski tells how these people are being assimilated, and he writes also of the economic outlook for Palestine. You will find the first article today on the

Hull Asks Soviet to Let Aide Visit Mrs. Rubens

Moscow Reveals That American Woman Is Detained as a Spy Suspect; Husband Also Jailed; Pair Have Been Held a Month.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Hull, receiving word from the Soviet government that Mrs. Marie Rubens, of New York City, had been arrested in Moscow on suspicion of espionage, asked Soviet authorities last night to permit an American official to see her and determine how she was being treated and whether her story of her detention corresponded with the Soviet version.

Counsel for Miss Constance Boerger, of New York, sister of Mrs. Rubens, announced he would ask the Secretary of State to arrange if possible that the prisoner be represented by counsel of her choice.

Overjoyed at word her sister—long missing—still was alive, Miss Boerger said in New York:

"I know she's completely innocent of any espionage. If she is involved, I am sure it was entirely without her knowledge."

Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet foreign minister, informed Hull through Loy Henderson, American charge d'affaires, that the mysterious woman known also as "Mrs. Donald Louis Robinson" had been under virtual arrest since the beginning of December.

[In Moscow, the United Press reported, Henderson expects to confer today with Mrs. Ruth Marie Ruebens, of Philadelphia, in her cell at Lubianka Prison.—Editor's note.]

Own Party Fills Shaky Cabinet Of Chautemps

Communists Repudiate the New Regime; Socialists Threaten to Bolt.

By the United Press.

Paris (Wednesday), Jan. 19.—Andre Franco-Poncet, French Ambassador to Berlin, has reported to his government that Germany is preparing another coup such as her reoccupation of the Rhineland, informed sources said today.

The informants said the gravity of the Ambassador's report was a contributing factor in former Vice Premier Leon Blum's unsuccessful attempt to establish over the weekend a cabinet on a national union basis.

The disclosure came shortly after Camille Chautemps, Radical-Socialist leader, ended five stormy days in which France was without a government by forming a cabinet composed solely of members of his own party.

There were strong indications the cabinet would not be supported by Socialists. Communists already have repudiated it.

President Lebrun signed a decree at 10:30 p. m., formally returning Chautemps to power and establishing his cabinet of 33 members—one of the largest in French history—as the nation's government.

People's Front Shattered.

Chautemps, embarking upon his fourth venture as premier, not only scuttled the Socialists who held portfolios in his previous government but replaced two Radical-Socialists who had been under attack by other divisions of the Popular Front.

The People's Front was shattered tonight and the only outward semblance of unity was the action of the Socialist Party's executive group in voting parliamentary support to Chautemps, providing he maintains the Popular Front program.

New Cabinet Listed.

The new cabinet as announced by Chautemps is:

Premier, Camille Chautemps; minister of state without portfolios, Georges Bonnet and Ludovic Frossard; justice, Cesar Campinchi; finance, Paul Marchandeau; foreign affairs, Yvon Delbos (retained); interior, Albert Sarraut; national defense, Edward Daladier (retained); navy, William Bertrand; air, Guy La Chambre; commerce, Pierre Cot; colonies, Theodore Steeg; labor, Paul Ramadier; agriculture, Ferand Chapsal; education, Jean Zay (retained); public works, Henri Quenuille (retained); pensions, Robert Lassalle; posts, Pierre Gentin.

Yangtze Battle Scene.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, Wednesday, Jan. 19.—Chinese and Japanese forces were reported locked in a bitter fight today along the Yangtze River, near where the United States gunboat Panay was sunk by the Japanese a month ago.

Chinese said two reinforced columns had arrived in the vicinity of Wuhu, 25 miles up stream from where the Panay sank, and were pressing the Japanese hard for possession of the important river port.

They said Japanese had rushed four boat-loads of troops to Wuhu to bolster their forces, while two Japanese warcraft shelled Chinese positions above the city.

[Severe guerilla fighting raged around Shanghai, the United Press reported.

[Foreigners who had returned to their homes outside the International Settlement and the French Concession were endangered. The Japanese urged that they withdraw into the foreign areas, but Britons refused to do so, and a number of Americans joined them.

[It was reported a Japanese column of 3,000 infantrymen was attacking 6,000 Chinese guerillas barricaded in the village of Chao Kao Chiao.—Editor's Note.]

Japanese reported a tank unit had occupied Hohsien, nearest town to the scene of the Panay incident, after killing 200 Chinese.

(A Hongkong dispatch said Japanese had warned British authorities that they planned to keep the Hongkong-Canton road under bombardment and that any British subjects using the road would do so "at their own risk.")

Rockefeller Speeds Building Of Three Big Radio City Units

By the United Press.

New York, Jan. 18.—John D. Rockefeller, jr., announced tonight he would speed completion of Rockefeller Center (Radio City) through erection of three more buildings at a cost of approximately $12,000,000, estimated to provide the building trades with 1,000,000-man days of employment.

The proposal was announced as evidence of Rockefeller's "continuing faith in the future of American business."

Construction of the first unit, a 15-story office building, will be started in a few weeks and completed in the autumn, it was announced.

"The practical answer to the problem of unemployment is to find jobs for men who want to work," Rockefeller said. "In the last analysis business and industry alone can provide the jobs necessary to restore the Nation's economic well being. When relief measure extend beyond a stop-gap period they inevitably tend to destroy the self-respect and the initiative of the men and women dependent on them.

"I believe that if capital and labor will face the future confidently and unafraid and will move forward together, they will find the Nation ready and willing to back them."

Detroit, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Detroit Edison Co. announced today it would expend $18,000,000 in 1938 on a construction and replacement program, the largest amount it has devoted to this purpose in any year since the depression.

Profits Levy Held Unjust To Railroads

'Semi-Public' Nature of Industry Stressed at House Hearing.

Tax Called 'Unjust.'

Use of the undivided profits tax principle in taxing railway earnings was opposed as "unjust" yesterday by R. V. Fletcher, general counsel of the Association of American Railroads.

Appearing at House Ways and Means committee hearings on the proposed 1938 revenue act, Fletcher recommended that railroads be exempted from the new undivided profits tax and be required to pay only the normal flat tax of 16 per cent imposed on banks and insurance companies.

The witness emphasized the "semipublic" nature of the railway industry, financial difficulties of the roads, and the "intensity of regulation," rate-fixing and expenditure fixing, to which the roads are subjected.

Later, J. Ninian Beall, general counsel for American Trucking Association, Inc., recommended "that the undistributed profits tax should not be applied to any transportation or other public service industry whose rates are subject to public regulation."

Beall also asked that the trucking industry be exempted from proposed penalty taxation of closely held corporations, because it "would include over 99 per cent of all trucking operations," and opposed committee recommendations covering shareholders' consent dividends.

The Ways and Means Committee, in the third day of hearings on its new tax report, heard Frank E. Gannett, Rochester, N. Y., publisher, urge tax relief in the form of a de-

Carol Dissolves New Parliament In Jewish Crisis

Bucharest, Jan. 18 (AP).—King Carol tonight ordered dissolution of the Rumanian Parliament chosen last month in elections which resulted in designation of anti-Semitic Octavian Goga as premier. The king decreed new elections for March 3.

Goga formed his government as head of the National Christian Party after the elections failed to give a clear majority to any singl party, leading to resignation of Premier Georges Tatarescu.

Carol acted shortly after the premier's anti-Semitic program was carried a step further when officials in Bessarabia Province forbade the use of the Yiddish language.

Ecuador Will Expel All But Farming Jews

Quito, Ecuador, Jan. 18 (AP).—The expulsion of all Jews from Ecuador except those engaged in farming was decreed today by the provisional military government of Col. Alberto Enriquez.

The decree declared hundreds of Jews permitted to colonize in Ecuador to escape persecution in central Europe had entered business instead of agriculture as the Ecuadorean government had expected them to do.

The decree gave all alien Jews not engaged in farming 30 days in which to quit the country.

Colleagues Give Barkley Election Aid

Illinois Leaders Meet With Roosevelt; Dissension Rumbles.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Bubbles of the simmering Democratic political pot came to the surface yesterday as party leaders from Illinois discussed the Senatorial situation in that State with President Roosevelt, and Senate New Dealers came to the aid of their leader, Alben W. Barkley, in his anticipated encounter this year in Kentucky with Gov. A. B. ("Happy") Chandler.

Each incident evidenced the rift occurring in Democratic ranks throughout the country as this year's primary contests approach. The developments of yesterday related only to Illinois and Kentucky, but beneath the surface rumbles of dissension are being heard among the Democrats in a dozen or more States as factional groups are commencing to square off for sharp intra-party fights.

Guffey Aids Barkley.

Most colorful of these affairs at the moment is that in Kentucky, where evidence accumulates daily that 39-year-old "Happy" Chandler will contest the right of Senate Leader Barkley to a renomination this summer. The Barkley faction already has started to build up its candidate for re-election, planning a testimonial dinner in his honor on Saturday night in Louisville. Gov. Chandler has declined to attend. Instead, his friends will give him a testimonial luncheon the same day.

Senator Joseph F. Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, came to Barkley's assistance yesterday. He revealed that in order to impress Kentuckians with the high esteem in which their senior Senator is held in Washington, he and four other New Deal Senators would attend the Louisville dinner. Those who will go to Louisville with Guffey are Senators Matthew M. Neeley, of West Virginia; Sherman Minton, of Indiana; Lewis B. Schwellenbach, of Washington, and Harry S. Truman, of Missouri—all Democrats of the New Deal vintage.

Unpalatable to Some.

Whether Guffey in arranging this honor for Senator Barkley was acting in his capacity as chairman of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee or as an individual was not revealed. Guffey last summer submitted his resignation as campaign committee chairman to Barkley, but there has been no announcement it has been accepted. At all events, no successor has been named to him in that capacity.

Guffey, however, must relinquish the campaign committee chairmanship for several reasons. One is that tradition bars from the campaign committee any Senator whose colleague is running for re-election. In Pennsylvania, Senator James J. Davis, Republican, must seek re-election or relinquish his seat. He

Ashurst Promises D.C. Vote Hearing

Chairman Ashurst, of the Senate Judiciary Committee, yesterday promised "prompt consideration" of the joint resolution introduced by Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, to give the District national representation and suffrage.

Senator Ashurst said he is favorable to "some representation" for the District in Congress, but he indicated he would not support the full program of the Lewis resolution.

Shop Robbed 3d Time As Officer Steps Out; Night Police Boosted

Clerk, Veteran of 4 Holdups, Says More Police Are Needed

Being held up is nothing new to Sam Mostow, chief clerk at the Harvard Liquor Store. He was victimized last night for the fourth time in a little more than two years.

Mostow—a husky Eastern High School graduate—is 23 and married. He is calm, even when gunmen enter his place.

SAM MOSTOW.

"I wasn't afraid," Mostow said last night after the latest holdup, "because I'm kind of used to it.

"And I don't blame the police. There ought to be more police to get these hoodlums and potential murderers off the street. The police here are doing all they can.

"Night after night there's a man watching the place, and often a man comes and works overtime just to protect me. That isn't fair. There ought to be more police in the District."

First thing Mostow did after the two colored bandits fled last night was to dart from the door and try to get the license number of their car. Then, being a young man very much in love with his wife, he called home after he called the police.

"It's happened again," he told pretty Mrs. Thelma Mostow, who waits for him nightly in their home at 5105 Second street northwest, northwest.

"Don't worry, honey; I'm OK."

McKellar Voices Doubt City's Record Can Be Topped 'Anywhere.'

Despite heavily reinforced police patrols throughout the District last night, bandits and burglars continued to pile up a record of violent crime after the District situation had been argued in the Senate earlier in the day.

The most spectacular of the night's crimes was the robbery of one liquor shop for the third time in a few weeks, despite the fact it was under special police protection. This followed by a few hours an order increasing the night police force, and the spirited Senate discussion of the crime wave.

The District's crime record was attacked on the floor by Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Lousiana, both of whom cited statistics to support their charges of police inefficiency. Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, defended District police efficiency and laid the crime wave to non-residents. In a committee hearing, Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, attacked the practice of paroling first offenders.

The first robbery occurred a few minutes after Patrolman L. M. Legg, who had been on guard in the store an hour in uniform, stepped out to make his 8 o'clock call from a police box. Legg had been assigned to watch liquor stores in the neighborhood and had gone on duty at 4 p. m.

Customers Also Robbed.

This store, operated by Sam Mostow at 2901 Sherman avenue northwest, yielded $65 from its till and the pockets of Mostow, two clerks and four customers. It was the third robbery in recent weeks of the same store, which was the scene of a gun battle last month in which a colored bandit was wounded and captured by Tenth Precinct Detective Robert Murray.

Customers in the store at the time were A. Magby, 2913 Georgia avenue, who lost $5; James Coles, 1006 Euclid street northwest, whose empty wallet was taken, and David Marshall, 909 Columbia road northwest, who lost $5. Clyde Brooks, 709 Elm street northwest, walked in just as the bandits were leaving and was not molested.

Half an hour later the two gunmen held up the delicatessen and liquor store of Eino Ambrogi at 2222 Fourteneth street northwest, taking $100. Nothing was taken from Elmer Lewis, 116 Ninth street southeast, the clerk, or from an unidentified colored customer.

Brown Adds Night Police.

In an effort to halt the crime wave, which has brought criticism from Congressional sources, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police yesterday assigned a third of the day force to special night duty. This move added 135 patrolmen at night.

Brown, head of a force which he repeatedly has declared inadequate to police rapidly growing Washington, denied the city was in the throes of a crime wave, and cited "an actual decrease in the number of robberies this month over December." Every city in the country, he said, has experienced a steady increase in crime over the past two years.

Court Upholds 'Closed Shop' of Transit Union

New York Judge Refuses to Consider Operations as 'Monopolistic.'

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 18.—New York's Court of Appeals upheld today the legality of a "closed shop" clause in an agreement between a labor union and an employer.

By its decision the court refused to uphold the contentions of six nonunion New York City rapid transit employes that an agreement between the Transport Workers Union of America and the New York Rapid Transit Corporation, Williamsport Power Plant Corporation, the Brooklyn & Queens Transit Corporation and Brooklyn Bus Corporation, was "monopolistic."

In their complaint, the workers charged that the agreement between the union and the corporations would not permit employment of a person not affiliated with the Transport Workers Union.

The court's opinion, written by Chief Judge Frederick E. Crane, held that:

". . . There is nothing in the present case before us to indicate that any injury was sought or intended through the plaintiffs or nonunion members, but that the objects of the contract and of the action of the defendants are to advance their own interests and ability, through the closed shop, to meet on even terms their employers in present or future negotiations."

In an election conducted by the National Labor Relations Board a year ago, the Transport Workers Union was selected as bargaining agent for all of the employes of all but one of the transit corporations.

3 D. C. Lawyers Facing Charges Of Malpractice

Bar Association Acts After Inquiry; Laws New President.

Charges of malpractice will be prefered in Police Court against three Washington lawyers this week, the District Bar Association was told at a meeting that elected Bolitha J. Laws, former assistant United States attorney, association president to succeed Henry I. Quinn.

Austin F. Canfield, chairman of the association's committee in charge of Police Court practices, reported that malpractice charges against one lawyer would be presented to Police Court judges at 1:30 p. m. today, with similar charges to be filed against two "additional" attorneys in a "day or so."

Two attorneys and two bondsmen were cited before Police Court Judge John P. McMahon December 14 after they had been accused of unethical conduct by Canfield's committee.

Pointing out that his committee has since been made the confidential agents of the court, Canfield declared he could not make public the names of the attorneys involved

127 Navy Airmen 1,067 Miles at Sea On Hop to Hawaii

By the Associated Press.

San Diego, Calif., Jan. 18.—A fleet of 18 Navy bombing planes droned high over the Pacific tonight, bearing 127 officers and men nonstop to Honolulu.

The big patrol bombers, massed in the greatest over-ocean formation flight ever attempted, expected to fly the 2,570 miles to Pearl Harbor, Honolulu naval base, in 18 to 20 hours.

The planes were 1,067 miles from here at 7 p. m., Pacific Standard Time (10 p. m., E. S. T.), radio reports said.

One of the flying boats was piloted by Lieut. Tom Hamilton, former Naval Academy football coach.

Hoover Flying East With Ross Kidnap-Killer; 'Ghost Rider' Describes Delivery of Ransom

Special Dispatch to The Post.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 18.—J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, arrived here tonight by airplane with a heavily-manacled Peter Anders, said by Hoover to be the confessed kidnap-slayer of Charles S. Ross.

He denied the prisoner was being taken to Tacoma, Wash., to be viewed by witnesses of the kidnaping of 10-year-old Charles Mattson, whose mutilated body was found a few days after he was abducted in December, 1936.

Published photographs of Anders bore resemblance to an artist's reconstruction of the Mattson kidnap-slayer. The Mattson case is one of two Federal kidnaping cases yet unsolved. The other is the disappearance December 4, 1937, of 32-year-old Arthur Freid, Bronx (N. Y.) businessman.

Hoover did reveal the plane was bound for Chicago, where the 72-year-old Valentine manufacturer was kidnaped September 24. It was en route from Los Angeles.

Hoover, after the suspect had been taken to the F. B. I. office, went to a hotel and retired.

Meanwhile, George Kukovac came forward with a stirring story of how, as a white-clad "ghost rider," he had delivered the bundle of ransom cash to the Ross kidnapers the night of October 8.

The 26-year-old delivery boy and veteran cyclist sped across country on a red and black motorcycle and, 5 miles east of Rockford, Ill., flung to the roadside a packet containing the $50,000.

Kukovac, "scared stiff," and riding at 80 miles an hour, carried out his orders exactly 13 days after Ross had been snatched from his automobile on a road about 12 miles from Chicago's Loop.

"Exactly five and one-tenth miles east of Rockford," he said, "I got the light signal once, the quick flashing of bright and dim lights of an automobile 25 or 20 feet be-

Wallace Holds Rate Rise Must Cut Rail Profits

Increase Would 'Intensify' Business Recession, Secretary Asserts.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace joined representatives of industry in arguments to the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday that the railroads would lose revenue if given the 15 per cent freight rate increase they are asking.

The Agriculture Secretary asserted the increase not only means less revenue for the railroads because of reduced traffic, but also would "intensify" the business recession.

"The commission might well consider," he said, "what the result would be if every industry throughout the country would increase its rates or prices in the face of the recession. There would be a still further decline in demand for goods and services, and the volume of traffic would fall still further."

Loss of Revenue Feared.

Other witnesses yesterday included:

John C. Magness, traffic director of the National Glass Container Association of America. He said the manufacturers would be forced to "localize" the industry if the rate increase was granted, thus causing an actual loss of revenue to the railroads.

Sheldon E. Wardwell, representing the Association of Newsprint Manufacturers of America, asked that newsprint be exempted from any increase. Wardwell said an increase would "hasten the death" of the American newsprint industry, divert paper mills to Canada and shift normal rail cargoes to water carriers.

R. A. Cooke, traffic manager of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, also said newsprint shipments would be diverted to water carriers. He did not formally oppose the increase, but gave the commission the results of a survey which showed the use of other means of transportation would result in a $410,342 loss to railroads in revenue from freight on newsprint.

Wallace said the rate increase would bring lower farm prices, further upsetting the national economy.

Demand conditions for farm products, he explained, are not as good at present as they were. This, added to recession in the national income, would make it impossible, Wallace insisted, for the farmer to pass increased costs on to the consumer.

"Consequently," he asserted, "an increase in freight rates would of necessity lower the price of farm products." He said any reduction in farm prices would be reflected immediately in loss of traffic to the railroads.

Gov. Homer A. Holt of West Virginia disputed testimony by Gov. George H. Earle of Pennsylvania that a rate increase would weaken an already failing Pennsylvania coal industry.

"Our position," Holt declared, "is that the existing differences already unduly favor Pennsylvania production. Should any revision of these differences seem expedient the revision should be downward; that is, the difference decreased or diminished."

U. S. Court Hears Appeal Today of 14 Algic Sailors

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 18 (AP).—The United States Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals will hear tomorrow the appeal of 14 seamen of the freighter Algic, who were convicted at Baltimore on charges of conspiracy and endeavor to revolt as the result of a sit-down strike they engaged in while their ship was at Montevideo last September 10

Nine seamen were sentenced to 60 days in jail each and five others were fined $50 each.

The Algic case was merely an incident in the general campaign of shipowners and capital to defeat the purposes of the maritime unions, Ralph Emerson, Washington representative of the Joint Maritime Legislative Committee, said in an address before the American Civil Liberties Union at Wesley Hall yesterday.

He said the shipowners had been unable to defeat the unions on the economic front, and had capitalized on the Algic incident to bring their fight to legislation and the courts.

"The Algic affair," asserted he, "was not mutiny in any sense. It was one incident, built up and developed in the war between capital and labor."

Kroger Seeks Traffic Lights For Park View Community

B. J. KROGER.

New President of Civic Group Also Campaigning for 10-Minute Bus Schedule for Section; Has Served Association Many Years.

By Christine Sadler.

Traffic problems occupy first place on the calendar of the Park View Citizens' Association, according to the newly-elected president, B. J. Kroger.

"We have been trying to get traffic lights at Georgia avenue and Park road, because that is a busy spot, and also at Park road and Park place at the Soldiers' Home," he said.

In addition to stopping the traffic at these points, for safety's sake, the association would like to regulate the bus traffic to a schedule which more nearly suits needs of the community.

"We want at least a 10-minute service. At the present time we have 20-minute service on the Catholic University bus line. Also we would like for the buses to run at little later than they do at night," Kroger said.

Active Two Decades.

Prior to his election to the presidency in December, Kroger had been vice president for five years. He has been an active member of the group for more than two decades.

The association was formed in 1908 and now has a membership of 400, Kroger said. He pointed out that the organization has led numerous fights for the Park View community betterment and has things cleaned up so well that at present it has no major construction program or battle on its hands.

"We worked to get the school and then to get the addition, and then to get the playground. The area was young when we were formed, and we can take credit for numerous improvements in the community, but just this minute our program is not so big," he declared.

Kroger is a native of Brooklyn, but has been in the District for 37 years. He is a plate printer at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, and has lived in the Park View area for 29 years.

Votes in New York.

He still votes in New York, however, returning to the city every year "just to keep in touch with the situation up there."

Personally, he is not in favor of local suffrage for the District and does not believe his association is. He is very much in favor of District representation in Congress, though. And he believes Congress should contribute a good deal more toward District expenses than it is doing.

He lives at 620 Kenyon street northwest, has a wife and three children. Civic work is his principal hobby.

On Friday—J. B. Dickman, jr., president of North Cleveland Park Citizens Association, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Educators Discuss Vocational Guides

Need for co-ordinating work of all agencies in the field of vocational education and guidance was stressed by prominent educators at a forum of the D. C. Guidance and Personnel Association last night in the National Education Association auditorium.

William F. Patterson, of the Federal commission for apprenticeship training, United States Department of Labor, led the discussion. On the panel were Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the District Board of Education; Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools in the District; Dr. Mary Hayes, of the National Youth Administration; Dr. W. D. Stead, United States Employment Office; W. A. VanDem, American Youth Commission; J. A. Lang, Civilian Conservation Corps, and Dr. R. D. Allen, assistant superintendent of schools in Providence, R. I.

Ga. House Passes Liquor Sale Bill

Atlanta, Jan. 18 (AP).—The House voted, 103 to 90, today for a bill to legalize liquor in 16 of dry Georgia's 159 counties. The measure was ordered sent to the Senate at once.

Last week the House voted, 98 to 90, against a similar measure to legalize sale and manufacture of liquor in 12 counties, but reconsidered after assurance Gov. E. D. Rivers would approve a repeal bill if passed.

Wine and beer are legal in Georgia, but "hard" liquors are barred by statutory prohibition.

Betters 'Bum Business.'

Philadelphia, Jan. 18 (AP).—Louis Pappas, who began a one-man battle 15 days ago against "bum business" by raising wages, cutting prices and hiring additional help at his restaurant, reported today that customers increased 68 per cent over any previous 15 days in eight years.

TVA Willing to Buy Willkie Utilities

Bulkley Urges Council as Aid To Government

Senator Wants Business, Labor, Farms, Science to Unite Thoughts.

A "National Council" of business, labor, farm and science leaders to "co-ordinate the best thought and experience of the people of the country and relate them to governmental policy," was proposed yesterday by Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman of the Senate Manufactures Committee.

Bulkley announced formation of an informal committee of 100 such leaders preparatory to calling a meeting to discuss the proposal. Last night he made public the indorsements of rival labor and farm leaders and spokesmen for business and scientific groups.

The proposed "National Council" would have advisory functions and be permanent in character. Bulkley said that "by helping us keep our economic mechanism working more efficiently and automatically, it might well decrease the need for governmental intervention."

Could Carry Load, He Says.

"I am confident," he said, "that through it we can implement and modernize our democratic machinery and make it adequate to satisfactorily carry the increasing load of the social and economic problems of modern civilization."

The Ohio Senator quoted President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, as calling the plan "a definite step forward," while Jett Lauck, economist for John L. Lewis, said "its merit is outstanding."

Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the National Grange, said he was in "hearty accord" and the plan should aid in dispelling "the present feeling of uncertainty, suspicion and hostility that exists between private business on the one hand and Government on the other."

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the rival American Farm Bureau Federation, said he was on Bulkley's informal committee and believed the council might "serve as a medium for the exchange of information and ideas and assist in bringing about better co-operation."

Called "Sound Approach."

Others quoted included John J. Watson, president of the International Agricultural Corporation, who called it "the soundest and fairest approach ever made to the subject;" Dr. Alexis Carrel, of the Rockefeller Institute, who said such a plan "is absolutely necessary," and Dr. Harold Urey, of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, who said he will "do all I can to further this proposal."

"In the near future I expect to call a general meeting of these individuals and groups from business, labor, agriculture, the sciences and other fields so that they can discuss the matter with each other, with the Committee on Manufactures and other members of Congress who are interested," said Bulkley.

"Sometimes the need of co-operation between Government and business has been emphasized, and sometimes the need of co-operation between Government, business and labor.

"What we really need, however, to meet the increasingly complex problems of an increasingly complex civilization is a united, co-operative approach to the problems of our economic system and our civilization as a whole on the part of the best, most intelligent and forward-looking elements."

HouseUnit Inquiry On Fares Recessed

The House sub-committee investigation of the Capital Transit Co. was recessed indefinitely yesterday after hearing Riley E. Elgen, chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, defend further the recent token order.

Elgen disclosed the commission is "seriously considering" an amendment to permit sale of three tokens for a quarter, if it is found that it will not cause loss to the company.

Hhe told the sub-committee that the commission adopted the 6-for-50-cents rate to speed up service and to increase the company's income.

Underwriters Cut Insurance Rates

Reduction in District fire insurance rates amounting to 10 per cent will become effective March 1, it was disclosed yesterday, following a conference of District of Columbia Underwriters Association.

At the same time it was disclosed that the National Government insurance department has been studying rates of insurance in the District and will shortly report to the Commissioners.

Reduced rates would apply on all dwellings in the District, and besides fire would include hail and lightning.

The Gallup Poll

Both Car Owners and Non-Owners Back Henry Ford's Stand on Unionization.

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Jan. 18.—Despite enormous gains in membership and power, the young United Automobile Workers Union, C. I. O. affiliate, faces an uphill fight to win the good will of the public in its controversy with Henry Ford over unionization of Ford workers.

George Gallup

This fact is indicated by the results of a survey conducted by the American Institute of Public Opinion as the smoldering Ford-C. I. O. controversy, which has already caused bloodshed and beatings, awaits review in the Federal courts.

The Institute asked voters in every State:

In the present dispute between Henry Ford and the Automobile Workers Union, are your sympathies with Ford or with the union?

The vote was:

For Union 34%

Car Owners for Ford.

Of special interest is the vote of the Nation's automobile owners. The great majority of those polled by the Institute say their sympathies are with Henry Ford. Among non-car owners sympathy is more divided, although even in this group a slight majority favor Ford.

	For Ford	For Union
Non-Car Owners	54	46

The struggle between Ford and the union began in earnest last summer when union organizers attempting to distribute handbills to Ford workers in Detroit were beaten up in the famous Battle of the Overpass. Subsequently, the National Labor Relations Board found Ford Motor Co. guilty of violating the Wagner act. Henry Ford's petition for a new hearing was denied by the board, which early this month took the case to a circuit court of appeals for an order to enforce its decision.

Vote Follows Trend.

The Institute survey found that the majority sympathies of nearly all population groups polled are on the side of Henry Ford. The exceptions are unskilled workers and persons on relief. A cross-section of both these groups indicated sympathy with the union cause. But an overwhelming majority of voters polled in the middle and upper classes say their sympathies are with Ford.

The majority sentiment toward the Ford case follows a trend clearly marked by earlier Institute surveys. The Auto Workers Union is the union which conducted the sit-down strike in General Motors a year ago. An Institute survey at the time indicated that the majority of Americans were strongly opposed to the sit-down technique and that the middle classes were growing increasingly fearful of the power of John L. Lewis and the C. I. O.

In its surveys on the General Motors strike the Institute found that the longer the sit-down strike continued, the more the voters sympathized with General Motors.

Since its function is to ascertain the facts about public sentiment, the Institute's position in all controversies is one of strict impartiality. But the facts uncovered by its surveys on the General Motors strike and the Ford case seem to indicate conclusively that the union has not succeeded in "selling" its cause to the public during the last year.

The Gallup Poll in Friday's Post will tell you America's reaction to the lynching law which is now being considered by Congress.

Sen. Bridges Seeks Inquiry On Worth of TVA to Consumer

T. V. A.

dicted financial catastrophe for these companies in the TVA arear," and "his forebodings have been consistently wrong." He added:

"Dister is coming this time, he (Willkie) states, because certain communities have voted to build and operate their own electric distribution systems, purchasing the power from TVA at wholesale, some of them securing their construction funds through loan-and-grant contracts with PWA, unanimously upheld by the Supreme Court on January 3, 1938."

"No One Wants Two Systems."

From this point Lilienthal approached in detail the Willkie proposal, basing his analysis on the statement: "No one wants two electric systems in a single town. No one wants actual and prudent investment in useful property to be destroyed."

He then declared, as to electric distribution system, "virtually every one of these communities" has "persistently sought to buy these properties." He declared that where Willkie's companies have "refused even to discuss sale, he must expect to find a certain amount of skepticism because of the past record of litigation and obstruction."

But Lilienthal predicted consummation of negotiations in this respect if accompanied by "clear evidence of a genuine desire promptly to reach a fair conclusion."

Of transmission lines owned by Willkie's companies, Lilienthal said the conference method could also acoid "uneconomic duplication and destruction of prudent investment," noting this had been accomplished a number of times already. Of generating plants in the TVA area, he said: "Mr. Willkie's companies in that area at the present time badly need additional power supply. In the immediate future, these companies must either purchase power in substantial quantities from TVA or build large additions to their capacity or both."

Sutherland Quoted.

He then declared flatly that the Government has in no case attempted to influence local elections in which municipalities decided to set up their own plants, and quoted former Supreme Court Justice George Sutherland's recent decision that the Government had made no efforts "to foster municipal ownership of utilities."

Willkie's answer declared that "for four years I have made repeated proposals for the solution" of this situation.

He said:

"On January 6, 1937, I proposed to the President in writing that the properties of the Tennessee Valley be bought as systems. To that proposal I have never had an acceptance or rejection.

"Insofar as I am able to understand Mr. Lilienthal's statement, it is proposed that we should resume negotiations with municipalities in order to sell the distribution systems to them at prices to be determined under the threat of duplication with Federal funds; that some of the transmission lines and some of the hydro-plants should be sold to the TVA at the TVA's prices; and that the balance of these facilities and the steam generating plants are to be retained by the company even when the market for their power is either eliminated or so far removed as to make economic operation impossible."

He insisted this would mean dismemberment of companies in that area, with a "tremendous" loss resulting to utility investors, and declared: "So broken up, the utility would be wholly unable to finance itself and would be easy prey for further TVA competition . . . If the investment in this business is to be saved, these utility systems must be bought as systems."

He asserted Commonwealth & Southern had advanced $30,000,000 to its southern operating companies in the past four years."

Senator Bridges said "The TVA has betrayed its trust." He argued that its contracts with four large industrial concerns and one public utility company meant that it had "arbitrarily sold out and contracted away the investment of taxpayers' money, not to further a social purpose but to benefit a few corporations, and large ones, at that, the same type of corporations that the President and Administration spokesmen have spent part of their time condemning."

These contracts, he declared, were between TVA and Monsanto Chemical Co., of the Aluminum Company of America; the Electro-Metallurgical Co., a subsidiary of Union Carbide & Carbon Corporation; the Victor Chemical Works, and the Arkansas Power & Light Co."

"Giant Concerns" Aided.

These "giant concerns," he shouted, were pledged by the TVA "not less than 91,000 kilowatts of firm power. The TVA's load at the end of four years—it was founded to aid co-operatives and municipalities—is 23,000 kilowatts for municipalities and co-operatives and four times that amount by private contracts with four favored corporations."

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts
The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chewing—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.
Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish. It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

House Reduces Treasury and Postoffice Bill

Appropriation Measure for 1939 Carries Sum of $1,515,352,286.

By the Associated Press.

The House yesterday approved a Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill for 1939 carrying $1,515,352,286—$8,116,050 less than budget estimates and $61,062,722 under the current year's appropriation.

Despite the final figure under budget estimates, a series of amendments adding $2,300,000 to the measure led Majority Leader Rayburn (Democrat), Texas, to warn his Democratic colleagues they would have to assume the responsibility "when the budget continues to be unbalanced."

Major additions made by the House to the committee bill included increases of $1,000,000 each for the pay of city mail carriers and for clerks in first and second class postoffices.

The reduction under budget figures was achieved by the elimination of a $2,500,000 item for construction of annexes at the Government Printing Office.

Representative Crowe (Democrat), Indiana, raised a point of order against that item because it called for reversion to the original plans for the buildings instead of using those approved by the Fine Arts Commission, which included "purely decorative" architectural features.

Immediately after disposition of the Treasury-Postoffice bill, the House turned to consideration of a $353,288,494 appropriation for the Navy.

Industrial Pickup In Spring Forecast By Farm Bureau

Some gain in production of industrial products in the next few months was foreseen yesterday by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in a monthly statement on farm products' demand and prices.

The bureau said "the lag between changes in industrial activity and consumer buying power probably will prevent material improvement in domestic demand for farm products generally before spring."

The current recession has been "less widespread than comment might indicate," the bureau said, the severe declines having occurred "largely in production of iron and steel, textiles, and automobiles." Retail trade and general business activity were said to have held up relatively well.

Senators Give Coalition Plea Wide Publicity

Bailey Mails Out 100,000 of Bi-Partisan Declarations of Principles.

By Robert C. Albright.

The bi-partisan "declaration of principles" prepared in the Senate more than a month ago as a basis for conservative coalition, is being reprinted and distributed in volume throughout the country, it was learned last night.

Senator Josiah W. Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, principal author of the so-called "Address to the American People," estimated there have been 250,000 reprints. He said more than 100,000 copies have been mailed out of his own office "in response to demand."

Denies Bloc Is Aim.

Bailey, who denied at the time the manifesto became public that "anything like the formation of a bloc, or coalition" was contemplated, repeated this disavowal yesterday, and added: "It isn't propaganda, either."

"Our whole purpose is to stop this trend toward collectivism by reasserting those fundamental principles which have made the American system of enterprise what it is."

The North Carolinian, who had the help of Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, and other Senators of both parties in drafting the "address," declared "thousands of requests have been received for copies and from organizations wishing to reprint it."

Copeland Helps.

Blanket permission has been granted by Bailey to persons or organizations who wish to republish the statement in whole or in part.

It was learned other Senators of both parties, who indorsed the "declaration of principles" last December on the Senate floor, are sending out copies.

"I have mailed out 10,000 prints to people in my own State, mostly on request," said Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), New York. "I have had literally thousands of inquiries and indorsements. Outside of my own State, most of them seem to be coming from Tennessee."

Copeland exhibited a petition several yards long from the "voters" of Rome, N. Y., addressed to "the Congress and the President of the United States," and commending the "address" as a "constructive program for legislation and employment rehabilitation." Copeland said it was signed by 2,000 of Rome's 10,000 voters.

Denies Secret Purpose.

The New York Senator also displayed a circular reprinting the address now being distributed by the New York State Economic Council.

Bailey denied there is any "secret purpose" on "political maneuver" behind distribution of the statement. Asked if any attempt is being made to get Senators to sign, he declared "there never has been any such effort."

"But there is nothing in it which anyone who believes in giving enterprise a chance cannot indorse," he said. "Certainly it can't be called an attack on the President. In his message to the special session November 15 he said the obvious task ahead was to induce the investment of private funds in business and enterprise. This merely serves to crystallize sentiment for the obvious task the President has called to our attention."

Warns of Recession.

Bailey said he paid for initial distribution of the statement out of his own pocket, but now charges the Government Printing Office cost of $4.60 a 1,000 for those who want copies in quantity.

The "address" warns of the possible consequences of another recession, and declares "a policy of co-operation by all concerned upon sound grounds will suffice to set the country as a whole on its accustomed way toward higher ground." It favors budget balancing, revision of the undivided profits and capital gains levies, an "impartial" Government attitude toward capital and labor, continuance of relief with local responsibility, and easing of taxes. It opposes Government competition with private enterprise and renewal of high volume Federal spending.

W.Va. Train Wreck Laid to Tampering

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—Railroad Detective C. R. Morris told State police today he believed a railroad switch lock had been picked, causing derailment of a locomotive and 11 loaded coal cars at Seth.

The derailment early today demolished the station at the little town on the Coal River division of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroad, about 20 miles from here. Engineer R. W. Coppers, of Huntington, W. Va., and Fireman H. B. Nunnally, of Russell, Ky., were hurt.

Odd Confederate Picture Unearthed in Capital

Monroe Johnson, a Department of Justice attorney, yesterday brought to light this picture which may be a rare photograph showing Jefferson Davis in uniform and surrounded by his generals. The unanswered question is whether the picture is a photograph, or a photographic copy of a painting or lithograph or a clever fraud. The reverse side bears the name of a Philadelphia photographer. The picture was given to Johnson many years ago by his father.

Pay Minimum Of $19.90 Aim Of Waitresses

Union Group Condemns Tip Inclusion in Basis of Scale.

Representatives of the waitress branch of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance, Local 781, asked the Minimum Wage Board for a minimum wage of $19.90 for women in that industry, the board announced yesterday.

Miss Rose Brunswick, representing the alliance, stated that her organization was opposed to including tips in consideration of the scale.

Miss Brunswick said tips vary according to station, season and other reasons beyond the control of the employes.

The minimum wage, she added, will tend to decrease tips and place the wage squarely upon the employers, who should pay it.

"If waitresses have to account for their tips, the waitress who does not turn in as much as another will be discharged," she contended. The employer will naturally want to keep the waitress that can make the most tips, or at least, turn in the most.

Further testimony will be heard this afternoon at the District Building, where the conference on women workers in the hotel, restaurant and allied industries is being held.

Harrison, N. J., Jan. 18 (AP).—A. E. Van Cleve, general manager of the Crucible Steel Co. of America, announced today settlement of a day-old strike called by a union of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

He said the only demand agreed to by the company was for a change in sanitary conditions at the plant. There was no statement by the union.

Likeness of Southern Leaders Baffles Students of Period

What May Be Rare Confederate Photograph Bearing Portrait of Davis and Other Chieftains Brought to Light by Attorney.

On the eve of Gen. R. E. Lee's birth anniversary today, to be celebrated by Washington Confederate groups at the Lee statue in the Capitol, an attorney in the Department of Justice brought to light what might be a rare Confederate photograph showing Jefferson Davis in epauletted uniform and surrounded by Beauregard, Albert Sydney Johnston (or is it R. E. Lee?), Leonidas Polk (it may be Magruder), and other Confederate chieftains.

"Has someone scooped Brady? Were the heads just pasted on the uniformed bodies? Is it a lithograph? Is it a photograph or a painting? Is it part photograph and part painting? Does it concern figures in the Civil War or the Mexican War? Is that the Confederate flag in the background, or a regimental flag? Do the shadows from the grounded swords and chair legs lies in the same direction? What is it, indeed?" asked Monroe Johnson, the attorney.

The photograph, painting, lithograph, the part photograph and part lithograph, the part painting and part photograph—whatever it is—was given to Johnson by his father years ago. It had, on the reverse side, the name of a Philadelphia photographer's studio. It has baffled Johnson and other students of Confederate lore. Yesterday it baffled Post photographers, who agreed with Johnson that such an odd piece of Confederate memorabilia had seldom been seen in these parts.

The head of Jefferson Davis looks like a painting; the head of Albert Sydney Johnston (or is it R. E. Lee?) looks like Lee, only Lee had a beard when the war broke out; the head of Polk (or is it Magruder?) seems definitely to have been pasted on a uniform that has Confederate trousers with a Yankee coat. There is a background with men charging on horses, that undoubtedly is a photographer's back screen, and it was deduced from this that it was more popular in 1861 to have a martial background than one with a Palm Beach scene interspersed with bathing beauties.

Meanwhile, the United Daughters of the Confederacy will place a wreath on Lee's statue in Statuary Hall of the Capitol at 2 p. m. today. The eulogy will be given by Senator Rankin, of Mississippi. The U. D. C. and Confederate Memorial Association will hold joint Lee-Jackson exercises tomorrow night at 1322 Vermont avenue. Frank McNinch, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, will speak. On Friday there will be a ball at the Willard, with Senator Josh Lee, of Oklahoma, delivering the oration.

Ball Player Held To Blame for Own Death in Traffic

Exonerating the motorman, a coroner's jury yesterday held Bailey Earl Clark, one-time major league baseball player, responsible for his death and that of Miss Lucy Ketchum in a street car-auto crash early Sunday.

Roy S. Crist, who was at the controls of the Fourteenth street car that rammed Clark's machine at the intersection of Arkansas avenue, was completely cleared after he testified the death auto disregarded two gongs from his bell.

Occupants of an automobile which was waiting for the street car to pass told the jury, however, that the street car was moving about 35 to 40 miles an hour, while Clark's machine was traveling no faster than 20. They were Arthur Salus, 1340 Seventh street northwest; Robert Weiss, 5705 Ninth street northwest, and M. L. Shapiro, 5012 Third street northwest.

The autopsy report of Deputy Coroner Richard H. Rosenberg said that Clark had been drinking prior to the accident.

Kin Confesses 'Silk Stocking' Killing of Two

Mineola, N. Y., Jan. 18 (AP).—District Attorney Edward J. Neary, of Nassau County, said today John Reo, 40, one-time filling station operator, had confessed the "silk-stocking murders" of Mrs. Lenida Waite, 9, and a neighbor, Jeanne Schuellain, 19, at Elmont last Wednesday.

Reo, a distant relative of Mrs. Waite, was locked up on charges of first-degree murder. Doctors who examined him said he was mentally unsound.

Gravelly Point Airport Sought In House Move

Representative Smith Offers Bill to Provide for New Field.

By James D. Secrest.

A new Gravelly Point airport bill, drafted in part on lines suggested by President Roosevelt, was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, who has championed the development for the past decade.

Two new provisions are included. One authorizes the President to "select and acquire" a site for an auxiliary airport to Gravelly Point. This field would be used pending completion of Gravelly Point and in "emergencies" thereafter.

Road Closing Provided.

The second provision authorizes the President, "if in his judgment public interest so requires," to close Military road through Washington-Hoover Airport temporarily so that the flying field may be improved. It stipulates, however, that the President shall allocate funds for the construction of a substitute road for Military road and then shall have Military road repaired for further use after the Gravelly Point Airport is completed.

The bill would appropriate $3,500,000 of Federal money and whatever amount needed annually to maintain the airport.

Smith said that the proposal for the auxiliary field was made because of President Roosevelt's suggestion in his message upon vetoing the bill to close Military road last summer. He said he presumed the site would be on higher ground than Gravelly Point, but that the selection would be left entirely to the President.

The provision relating to the closing of Military road, Smith said, was entirely his own idea.

He said he believed that even the owners of Washington-Hoover Airport would want the road reopened if the airport were to be abandoned so that the property would have greater value for industrial development.

Gravelly Point, under the terms of Smith's bill, would be developed and maintained as a flying field by a National Capital airport commission. Members of the commission would be the Assistant Secretary of Commerce in charge of aviation; the United States engineer for this district, and "the director of national parks."

Referred to Committee.

As the latter office has been abolished, it is presumed that the post would fall to the chief of the National Capital Parks office.

The bill was referred to the House Military Affairs Committee.

Both Smith and Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, were called to the White House last week to discuss the local airport situation, and as a result it was reported reliably that the Camp Springs site recommended by the Washington Airport Commission would be scrapped.

Nichols, while indicating he was open to a compromise of the Gravelly Point-Washington Airport contest, said he would introduce legislation providing for the closing of Military road to permit Washington Airport to expand its runways and thereby reduce the hazards of landing and take-offs.

'Mate-Swap' Case Divorces Given

By the Associated Press

Salem, Mass., Jan. 18.—Divorces were granted late today to Calvin M. Watson, 32, and Mrs. Edith E. Lee, 27, who named each other's mates as co-respondents in Salem's sensational "wife-swapping" case.

Probate Judge Edward B. O'Brien granted the divorces on grounds of infidelity and said evidence in the cases automatically would be considered by the district attorney for possible criminal action.

Moore Names Hague Lawyer To Senate Seat

Jersey City Attorney Takes Post After Mayor Turns It Down.

By the United Press.

Trenton, N. J., Jan. 18.—Gov. A. Harry Moore today named John Milton, of Jersey City, to succeed him as United States Senator, a post Moore relinquished when he became Governor.

Milton, 57, is personal counsel to Mayor Frank Hague of Jersey City, who declined the appointment when it was offered to him by Moore as a sixty-second birthday present.

Moore took office as Governor today, thereby vacating the Senatorship.

Milton never has held an elective position, but has been assistant city attorney and corporation counsel for Jersey City, and is a member of the Port of New York Authority for New Jersey. He also has been prosecutor of pleas for Hudson County.

Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, was in the Governor's office as the appointment was announced. A moment later Milton entered the room through a side door. Byrnes leaned across a table and shook hands with him.

Milton said he is going to Washington Monday to take the oath of office. He has three children and has been a "lifelong Democrat," he said.

Officials Linked In Car Theft Ring Expose at Boston

Boston, Jan. 18 (AP).—Police Sergt. Thomas F. McLaughlin, of Boston, returning today after an investigation that led to the recovery of 45 stolen automobiles in New Hampshire, Vermont and New York, announced some had been found in the possession of New Hampshire and Vermont public officials.

Some of the officials, McLaughlin said, had "dealt" in automobiles stolen in Boston. He said he had been informed the Federal Bureau of Investigation had begun inquiries.

Barkley Wins Senate Aid for Kentucky Fight

Politics.

is expected to be opposed by Gov. George H. Earle.

Another reason Guffey must give up the chairmanship is that he has become unpalatable to the Democratic Senators who opposed President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization program. In a speech on August 20 last Guffey singled out by name Senators Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana; Joseph C. O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, and Edward R. Burke, and called for their defeat because of their opposition to the court plan, even though they are Democrats. O'Mahoney at that time told the Senate Guffey "must go."

Still another reason why Guffey will relinquish the chairmanship is the possibility he may be a candidate for Governor of Pennsylvania this year. Earle is prohibited by the State Constitution from succeeding himself, and there is keen rivalry among the Democrats for his place. In the interest of harmony, it has been proposed Guffey be drafted to keep Pennsylvania State government in the Democratic column.

At all events, Guffey is an ardent supporter of Senator Barkley, and by rallying a group to go to Louisville has indicated he is ready to do all he can to aid the Kentuckian in any local difficulties he may have.

Hasn't Yet Said.

Chandler has not yet declared he will oppose Barkley, but he has given strong indications of that intention. Most convincing of these is his refusal to attend the dinner honoring Barkley. When he first declined he did so on the ground that he had a previous engagement—unrevealed.

Word now comes to Washington the youthful Governor has become more definite and forthright in his reasons for declining the invitation. He gave the Louisville Courier-Journal a statement yesterday asserting that because the Barkley dinner, by accident or design, had taken on political significance, he felt "my attendance would be misinterpreted as an indorsement of Senator Barkley for renomination."

He added that "I did not want my friends to misconstrue my attendance and decided to regret"—which is a thinly veiled way of saying he does not approve of the Barkley candidacy for a renomination. The reason he does not approve of Barkley, it is explained, is because he has his eye on Barkley's Senate seat.

The Illinois Democratic leaders who conferred with the President were Mayor Edward J. Kelly of Chicago, and Democratic National Committeeman Pat Nash, of that State. They came to the White House after Senator William H. Dieterich, of Illinois, announced his candidacy for renomination by the Democrats on a platform pledging support to President Roosevelt's policies.

Illinois Is Surveyed.

Kelley and Nash explained they had surveyed the Illinois political situation with the President, but had reached no conclusions and had sought no commitments. They said they had not indorsed any candidate for the Senate. It is known, however, that the State Democratic organization of Gov. Henry Horner is opposed to Dieterich—as well as Kelly and Nash. The latter have been regarded as friendly to Dieterich. The Horner faction is certain to oppose renomination of Dieterich.

President Roosevelt declined to discuss the conference, asserting Kelly and Nash had agreed with him to tell newspapermen another subject was discussed. He could not remember what subject, but felt bound by this agreement.

Dieterich has been one of the President's most loyal followers in the Senate. He fought for the Supreme Court bill; he participated in blocking hearings on Justice Hugo L. Black's Ku Klux Klan affiliations, and at the last minute last July he switched his position under pressure and voted for Barkley for floor leader, the Roosevelt candidate. Barkley won by one vote.

Gov. Horner also has been an ardent supporter of the President, so that Mr. Roosevelt cannot take sides in that contest without embarrassment. There has been some talk of a compromise candidate on which the Nash-Kelly and the Horner wings of the party could agree. But that is not possible without discarding Dieterich, who has been the Administration's friend.

Profits Tax Is Called 'Unjust' In Legal Plea for Railroads

duction of wage dividends for companies distributing profits to their employes. Gannett said he already has put into operation a plan of sharing profits with employes.

Representative Fred M. Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, pointed out the roads still have the privilege of filing consolidated tax returns. Fletcher said that if this privilege were denied the result "will be perfectly disastrous."

Contending arguments for an undivided profits tax did not apply to the railroads, Fletcher said the Interstate Commerce Commission already can prevent a road from "getting too large." He said the railways might be in a better position if they were in control of a few large systems. But he argued the "principle of wholesale consolidation is of doubtful propriety." He said consolidations should proceed along "natural lines" and not be imposed by the I. C. C.

Fletcher said nearly $18,500,000,000 in railroad securities are outstanding. He traced the course of railway income taxation from $88,658,301 paid in 1929, down to $10,187,642 in 1931, and up to $30,660,482 in 1936.

Speaking, he said, for the motor carrier industry, Beall later told the committee the trucking industry might be "the last stand of independent businessmen against monopoly, insofar as national business is concerned." Beall said the industry is "composed almost entirely of small businessmen."

Gannett told the committee he supported a tax on profits, but thought the Government should "set up an incentive for companies to share their earnings with their employes, instead of forcing distribution to stockholders or paying taxes to the Government." He said his proposal would "promote cooperation between employer and employe," and "purchasing power would be tremendously promoted."

As the procession of witnesses continued, C. D. Laylin, counsel for the Ohio State Chamber of Commerce, recommended outright repeal of the undivided profits tax. He said business men of his section would prefer a slightly higher flat tax on corporate earnings, and called the undivided profits levy "a deterrent to quick recovery."

Fletcher presented the railways' tax case through most of the morning and early afternoon. While admitting that railroads would benefit along with other corporations from lighter levies provided in the report, he said railroads generally believed they "should come under a straight normal tax of 15 to 16 per cent."

When Chairman Robert L. Doughton asked how the revenue thus lost could be made up, Fletcher said:

"I wish I could do that. But I think you could get it back in a way that wouldn't be so unjust."

He said, "This bill means a 20 per cent rate for many railroads that have to set money aside for sinking funds." Pointing to the volume of railroad expenses for nonrevenue-producing items and deferred maintenance costs that cannot be charged to expenses, he said, "No industry in the country has greater need."

Fletcher asked the committee to retain provisions permitting exemption from the undivided-profits levy for companies having contracts not to pay dividends. Under the proposed bill he said railroads thus unable to distribute dividends would be subjected to a 4 per cent penalty.

false passports of various countries, Litvinoff said.

The Soviets charge they entered Russia illegally.

Mrs. Rubens is being cross-examined but the examination has not proceeded sufficiently to warrant a formal charge of espionage, Hull was informed.

Henderson reported that:

"Early in November a couple bearing passports in the name of Donald Louis Robinson and Ruth Norma Robinson registered at the National Hotel, Moscow.

"Activities of these persons were so unusual they attracted the attention of the Soviet internal authorities.

"In the middle of November the husband disappeared from his hotel. The wife informed the internal authorities he had become ill and had gone to a hospital, the name of which she did not know.

"A search of all hospitals in Moscow and suburbs failed to reveal his presence.

"In early December a suspicious person was detained for examination in Sverdlovsk (a town among the Ural Mountains). He was found to be in possession of numerous passports from various countries, including an American passport in the name of Donald Louis Robinson.

"Investigation of this person revealed he was the missing man from Moscow and gave rise to the suspicion that he was engaged in espionage.

"Authorities decided to take the wife also into custody in the hope that by questioning her more information regarding the activities of the couple could be obtained.

"Therefore she was arrested in Moscow several days after the arrest of the husband. (She disappeared, according to the embassy reports, December 9.)

"Although the wife also is suspected of being implicated in espionage, her examination has not as yet progressed sufficiently far to warrant a formal charge of that nature being placed against her. The examination is continuing.

"In any event, it is clear that she entered the Soviet Union illegally."

Commissioners Favor Bill to Curb Nuisances

The District Commissioners yesterday submitted a favorable report to the House District Committee on the Collins bill to enable them to curb nuisance industries, including slaughter houses, by limiting the discharge of industrial waste into the sewerage system.

Designed to block construction of the proposed abattoir at Benning by Adolph Gobel, Inc., the bill would authorize the commissioners to impose heavy fees on any industry which dumps an abnormal amount of waste into the city's sewers.

Roosevelt Speech Launches Radio Drive for Tourists

The United States launched a radio bid for tourist trade against international competition Monday with President Roosevelt himself the star salesman. His initial canvass, read by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, opened a series of weekly world-wide broadcasts over short-wave stations W2XAF and W2XAD.

Praising the work of the new U. S. Tourists Bureau under the National Park Service, the President said it has stimulated travel in America.

"I hope," he said, "that it will encourage more Americans to see and know their own country, and that it will be regarded as a personal service bureau by the peoples of other countries, to whom we extend the hand of warmest friendship and the friendly invitation of a good neighbor to visit America."

Interior Department officials said it was the first time the Federal Government has used the airways to enter the field already cultivated by Italy, Great Britain, Russia, Germany, and France. Programs will be broadcast in Spanish and French and, under present plans, will be continued a year on donated time.

Bandits Active As D. C. Boosts Night Patrols

Crime.

was a happy hunting ground for bandits, burglars, purse-snatchers and yeggs in 36 cases. Of these, three were holdups, five were pocketbook snatchings, two were attempted safe crackings, three were robberies of parked automobiles and the remaining 21 were housebreakings.

Police records showed that from October 16 to November 16 54 cases of robbery from the person, including holdups, purse snatchings and robbery after assault, were reported. From November 16 to December 16 reports of 79 such cases were received, and from December 16 to January 16 there were 60 such reports.

Decrease Is Shown.

Statistics compiled last night under the direction of Brown showed an apparent decrease in holdups and robberies in January this year compared with 1936 and 1937. Records for 1938 included the period through January 17.

Total holdups and robberies were 150 in January, 1936; 148 in 1937, and 69 to date in 1938. Attempted holdups and robberies were 14 in 1936; 11 in 1937, and 7 so far in 1938.

These were broken down to show there were 99 robberies "by force and violence" in 1936; 85 in 1937, and 48 to date in 1938. Pocketbook snatchings reached 34 in 1936; 44 in 1937, and 18 to date in 1938. Pickpockets were successful 17 times in 1936; 19 in 1937, and 3 so far in 1938.

Attempted robberies "by force and violence" in 1936 were 9, in 1937 were 10, and so far in 1938 were 6. Attempted pocketbook snatchings reached 5 in 1936, 1 in 1937 and 1 in 1938 to date.

Problem Up in Senate.

Crime in the District again was injected into Senate debate on the antilynching bill when Senator McKellar read into the record the complete story of "50 crimes in 48 hours" published yesterday in The Post. In addition, he read a record of convictions for murder and rape in the District for the years 1934-1937, inclusive.

"I don't think there is a State or city government anywhere that can excel that record," he said after reading a Post headline: "Bandits Kidnap, Beat Man as District Counts 50 Crimes in 48 Hours."

Not D. C. Citizens, He Says.

These crimes are committed largely by nonresidents of the District, Senator Lewis said, after Senator McKellar had charged the Federal Government with inability to enforce laws against crime in its exclusive bailiwick.

These transients, Senator Lewis said, "pass through the Capital and no doubt commit offenses in the Capital. But they are not of the Capital; they are not citizens of Washington.

"I hesitate to join in that which merely holds up the Capital morn, noon and night as a despicable place and impeach it before all as unworthy of the residence of law-abiding citizens," he said. "I feel that we should look at this situation fairly and recognize that the many offenses to which the Senator from Tennessee from day to day has alluded are not the result of the action of those who reside in the city of Washington, but unfortunately those who come into our midst from other sections of the land."

More Judges Held Need.

Senator McKellar quoted from a report on crime conditions by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, and insisted more judges were needed here.

A table comparing crime in Washington and in New Orleans, in which Washington came out second best, was placed in the record by Senator Ellender, who said the cities were approximately equal in population. New Orleans, he said, is governed by its citizens, while Washington is Federally controlled.

In 1935, Ellender said, 1,527 violent crimes were committed in New Orleans, 735 of which were by colored persons, while in Washington there were 2,965, of which 2,004 were by colored persons. The table listed for 1936 a total of 1,471 such crimes in New Orleans 718 by colored persons, while in Washington that year there were 3,587, of which 2,810 were charged to colored persons.

He said the colored population of Washington was 132,086, or 28 per cent of the total, while that of New Orleans was 129,632, or 27 per cent of the total.

Stitely Case Brought Up.

Washington's crime situation was fired also in an investigation by the Senate Public Lands Committee into methods whereby Reno Stitely, former chief voucher clerk in the Interior Department, embezzled $80,000 in CCC funds in three and one-half years. Learning, in response to a query why Stitely was being considered for a parole instead of being sentenced, that Federal law required such a proceedure in the case of first offenders, Senator Ashurst sharply criticized conditions here.

"I don't wonder," he said, "that Washington gets the reputation it has when such delays as this happen. It is no wonder when they bring such men as Beard back here.

"I just want to say this: They've tried striking at criminals with a soft hand. Now it's time to use the mailed fist. There is too much of this parole stuff. Now take this Beard case—it's an outrage."

Sam Beard, once gambling king of Washington, was taken to Lorton Reformatory to complete a six-year sentence for violation of gaming laws after serving 18 months at Atlanta. He was ordered returned to Atlanta after a storm of protests from organizations and officials, who feared he would reach through the bars of Lorton to regain control of rackets.

Nearly 400 members of the District of Columbia Sunday School Association last night commended the Police Department on its war on crime in a resolution which will be mailed to members of the Senate and House who have referred to the Washington crime wave. The resolution held the work of police "highly commendable in view of the existing laws." It was explained the term "existing laws" referred specifically to regulations regarding the numbers racket.

Complains of Small Force.

In his denial that a crime wave was current, Brown reiterated his oft-voiced complaint of insufficient police personnel.

"Each precinct captain," he said, "has deplored the lack of personnel of the department. They complain they are unable to handle the large increases in population, which increases crime, with the number of policemen they have.

"Our force today is hardly any larger than it was ten years ago, though there has been a population rise of nearly 100,000 persons."

An echo of Monday night's record line-up where 11 suspects were identified by victims in 20 robberies, reverberated when Inspector Bernard W. Thompson and a squad of detectives visited 22 places held up by a gang of colored bandits from Baltimore. With them was Henry M. Towson, one of two alleged members of the gang who were captured after a running gunfight Friday night after an automobile crash at the Peace Cross in Bladensburg, Md. Detectives said they confessed 40 holdups and Towson identified victime and was identified at all 22 places visited.

Andrew Walker, 20, colored, was held for investigation in connection with the robbery of Betty Davis, 62, colored, who is in Casualty Hospital with a skull fracture. Walker was arrested by Detective Sergt. Elmer Lewis, who recognized him from a description. He was identified at the hospital by the woman.

Meanwhile, reports of housebreakings, robberies and purse snatchings continued to pour into police headquarters.

Mary J. Green, 57, of 1229 Tenth street northwest, was robbed of her life savings—$700—by a colored man who grabbed her pocketbook in the hallway of her home.

The woman said she was taking the money to the bank when the man approached.

Attempts were made to crack the safes in two junior high schools.

Charles Warner, principal of Hine Junior High, Seventh street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast, said the hinges of a safe in the school's office had been sawed, but the burglars failed to open the box.

The combination was knocked from a safe at the Paul Junior High, Eighth and Oglethorpe streets northwest. Phillip B. Trammell, custodian, reported. The school was entered through a door leading from a new wing under construction. Nothing was taken.

Clothing valued at $430 has been stolen from a department store during the past week, it was reported yesterday.

Berger's Liquor Store, 53 E street northwest, lost a quart of whisky and $10 in cash last night when a delivery boy was held up at gunpoint by a colored man. Clarence Wesley, 26, of 511 Fifty-eighth street northeast, a clerk in the store, said he sent the whisky and cash for change to 406 First street northwest in response to a telephone order.

Mother and Son Escape Slayer of Six

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Her senses still numbed from a hand-to-hand struggle with the slayer of two of her children, Mrs. Marvin Leflay embraced her 4-year-old son, Robert, who blew out a lamp to save himself from gunfire by his uncle, Lawrence Leflay. The uncle slew six persons, including his wife, his own two children and himself, in a feud over a farm he operated near Durand, Wis., with his brother, Marvin.

hind me. I threw the package hurriedly to my right.

"I was going between 30 and 40 miles an hour then, and I shifted to the right running board of my motorcycle and crashed it on the left side of the road. I picked myself up and saw a car coming from the west. I let this car pass and heard a car screaming down the road behind me. It made a U-turn and sped back east."

Exchange of the ransom money, which he received in Chicago from Ross' attorney, had been prearranged in that maner through a classified advertisement, phrased to convey the impression the attorney had an automobile for sale.

Grief-stricken and broken in health, Mrs. Charles S. Ross remained secluded in her apartment today and declined to comment on the announcement that her husband's slayer had confessed.

Miss Florence Freihage, former secretary to Ross, who was with him September 2 when he was snatched from his limousine and had pleaded with the kidnapers that his health was poor and they would endanger his life, left word with her mother and sister in Chicago today that she would be gone "three or four days."

Then she packed a bag and left home after being informed of Ander's capture. Relatives did not know where she had gone or if it was upon instructions from Federal agents.

Statement Kept Secret.

Hoover said Anders, a curly-haired man of about 30, who formerly worked as a logger in the Pacific Northwest, made a 27-page statement. The chief G-man, however, declined to make its content public.

Anders also confessed the murder of his partner in crime, whom he identified as Alton Gray. He hid the bodies near Roekford, Ill., presumably across the State line in Wisconsin. First, Anders said, he shot Ross, then Gray.

"Anders shot the two men through the head," Hoover said, "but all we can say for certain is that the killings took place on the outskirts of Rockford, Ill., and that the bodies were apparently hidden somewhere over the Wisconsin line."

He fixed the time of the slayings as October 10 or 11.

Ross, 72-year-old Chicago clubman, was abducted September 25. A $50,000 ransom was paid October 8. It was the trail of these "hot" bills, Federal agents reported, that led to the capture of Anders last Friday at the Santa Anita race track near Los Angeles.

Only $14,402 was found among the prisoner's effects. There was no accounting for the balance of $35,598.

Hoover's disclosures turned the hunt for the bodies of Ross and Gray to the countryside between Rockford and Beloit, Wis. Federal agents were expected to begin a search of that territory tomorrow.

Without the bodies the Government would have difficulty prosecuting Anders despite his confession.

The American Newspaper.

Compared with the ideal, many shortcomings are to be found in American journalism. But when the press of this country is matched against that of other lands, as Bruce Bliven noted in his Bronson Cutting Memorial lecture, relatively few apologies are necessary.

American newspapers still have many problems to solve and plenty of scope for improvement. But progress in journalism, as in any other profession, is not measured by what remains to be done. Rather it is indicated by the difficulties overcome and the standards upheld in spite of demoralizing influences. Today a world-wide survey of important developments, unbiased in presentation and as free from inaccuracy as the essential speed of operation permits, is taken for granted by every resident of this country. But we have only recently learned to expect this. And the magnitude of the achievement is emphasized by the deficiencies of the controlled press in many parts of the world.

Frank B. Noyes, president of the Washington Star, last week announced that he will not accept re-election as president of the Associated Press at the expiration of his thirty-eighth annual term, in April. His record of achievement in that office is one way of measuring the progress made by American newspapers in the past generation. Mr. Noyes and a few other farsighted newspapermen founded the Associated Press in 1893. In that relatively short period, this nonprofit-making, nonpartisan news agency has made a tremendous contribution toward elevating American journalism to the high plane it now occupies.

Such accomplishments are not an inevitable consequence of external events. Rather, they reflect the courage and intelligence of the men who have guided the destinies of the American press in its effort to report, to clarify and to assist in understanding current history. Nor is it by mere accident that freedom of the press prevails here when, as Mr. Bliven pointed out, so much of the world is denied a comparable medium of information.

The press is free, of course, because democratic government still prevails. But it is equally true that democracy continues because the press is free. So long as the newspapers retain their constitutional right of uncensored expression there will be little danger of any form of dictatorial government arising here. And so long as the public is properly critical of newspaper shortcomings they will tend to disappear.

The Naval Appropriation.

The naval supply bill, as reported out by the House Appropriations Committee, is a harsh reminder of the failure of our will for peace to insure the security of the United States.

The measure calls for the expenditure of $553,266,494 to maintain the Navy. Not only does this constitute the biggest peacetime appropriation for the first line of defense; it is also the fourth biggest appropriation in the Nation's history.

Together with the anticipated expenditures for the Army, the United States during the coming fiscal year will spend a staggering sum for defense purposes. It is a great burden which the American people are called upon to bear. And it is certain to be an increasing one if present world chaos spreads. As Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, points out:

> The present moment is not one when the United States can safely reduce its means for national defense without jeopardizing our national security.

With this the great majority of Americans will wholeheartedly agree. But the best interests of the United States will, obviously, not be served if our defense efforts are limited to naval and military preparations. The very fact that we find it necessary to spend so large a sum for defense shows how naive is the belief that the United States can will itself into isolation from the rest of the world.

Unless and until this country elects to engage in a positive peace policy, the burden of our armaments is likely to increase. For no other nation, faced by the necessity of having to prepare unaided to resist attack either by an aggressor or a combination of aggressors, can afford to curtail or even slow up its preparedness measures.

A reduction of armaments can occur only in a setting of greater international security. Achievement of such a setting, in turn, depends in no small measure on whether the United States continues to believe that isolation from world trends can be achieved by wishful thinking, or even by trying to vote ourselves into immunity.

Reorganization Problems.

Reorganization of Federal executive agencies is designed to eliminate overlapping and duplication of functions with consequent impairment of efficiency and waste of time, energy and public funds. Any effective reorganization plan should, as a matter of course, therefore, result in substantial reductions in Government outlays, even though economy is not the sole or even primary aim of proposed changes.

In a minority report Senator Byrd maintains, however, that the Senate omnibus reorganization bill "gives little promise" of achieving much-needed reductions in the scale of regular expenditures. He appeals for "assurance that a reorganization will accomplish the great savings possible through economies, simplicity and coordination of the sprawling Federal structure."

His criticism of specific features of the Senate bill is patently not aimed at sabotage of the reorganization plan as a whole. He, too, believes that the present setup needs overhauling. What he seeks are changes which will, in his opinion, ensure a safer, more efficient and more economical kind of program than the one under consideration. He objects, for instance, to the tremendous powers that would be conferred upon the President in the execution of reorganization plans to "readjust, and transfer and retransfer property, personnel and balances of appropriations" at any time during a three-year period.

Senator Byrd does not deny that the Chief Executive would have to be given considerable discretionary power to accomplish any worth-while reorganization of the Federal administrative agencies, since Congress could not pass upon all the details of any plan. Congress can and should, however, introduce safeguarding restrictions and limitations to prevent possible abuse of executive authority. Senator Byrd's complaint is that the Senate bill lacks certain of these essential protective features. Specifically, he charges that it might "possibly" give the President power to increase the number of Government agencies and that it would enable him to perpetuate so-called emergency organizations beyond the time at which they are supposed to terminate.

These and other indicated loopholes in the criticized bill could, of course, be plugged without depriving the President of the authority needed to carry out a reorganization plan in accordance with the general policies laid down for him by Congress.

Senator Byrd's objections to the methods proposed to extend the civil service are likewise not destructive in intention. On the contrary, he heartily sympathizes with efforts to broaden and strengthen the merit system of appointment. He does not believe, however, that the Senate bill would provide the proper kind of nonpartisan personnel administration needed to eradicate the spoils system.

A single civil service administrator subject to removal by the President would, he thinks, be a poor substitute for the present bipartisan commission. Furthermore, the proposal to bring within the civil service and merit system all but policy-making positions leaves it to the President to decide what offices or positions are policy determining. As Senator Byrd points out, the President could, therefore, "fill vacancies with political appointments to all 'key' positions in the Federal service, including the independent quasi-judicial, quasi-legislative, regulatory establishments." The protection now afforded these independent agencies against executive dictation would certainly be very inadequate under such an arrangement.

Another highly controversial feature of the reorganization bill is the plan to abolish the office of Comptroller General and concentrate responsibility for financial management in the Treasury. In raising this issue as well as other questions relating to other aspects of the reorganization plan, the Senator from Virginia has performed the service expected from a conscientious legislator.

If enacted, the Senate reorganization bill would make possible a veritable upheaval of the executive branch of Government, and enormously increase the power and prestige of the Presidential office. Whether one agrees or disagrees with the views set forth in the minority report, therefore, they are deserving of most careful study and full discussion. While there is urgent need of reorganization to eliminate the waste and inefficiency generally admitted to exist, the emergency is not so pressing as to justify hasty acceptance of a comprehensive reorganization plan whose nature and aims are as yet little understood.

A Feeling Of Proximity.

Mayor LaGuardia of New York has served as spokesman for the chief executives of many cities in his plea for a continuance and expansion of WPA programs. "Work relief," he asserts, "has been established as the American way of providing relief. It is the responsibility of the Federal Government to plan for the unemployed as the problem is national."

When the heads of hard-pressed municipal governments turn to the Federal authorities; instead of seeking aid from their respective State governments in meeting increased relief demands, it is a development of major political significance. In a recent report dealing with the problems of our cities, the National Resources Committee stated correctly that only in the past few years did the Federal Government, "which has hitherto largely ignored the existence of cities and had carried on its relations with them exclusively through the States, begin to recognize the need of dealing directly with cities as political, economic and social entities."

The present system of Federal aid, administered through the WPA, has provided a direct point of contact between Federal and local authorities, greatly increasing the political importance of the cities at the expense of that of the States. As one compares the relatively limited amount of State contributions with the large volume of Federal funds expended upon work relief in the New York City area it is easy to see why Mayor LaGuardia told the Senate committee that "I feel closer to the Federal Government than to my State."

Maintaining that New York City's contribution is far above the average, if the total load of work relief is taken into account, Mayor LaGuardia said that he would contribute the same percentage as South Carolina if WPA would take care of the same proportion of his employables. This indorsement of a Nation-wide uniform formula in apportioning Federal relief funds deserves examination.

The chief excuse for the present system of direct Federal administration of relief is the latitude given WPA to vary contributions with reference to local taxable capacity as well as to local needs. If some set formula is to be adopted, in apportioning Federal funds, it would seem that the time has come to return to the system of grants-in-aid. They are the customary method of extending Federal assistance to the States and local communities.

Since it is certain that some measure of Federal assistance in taking care of the unemployed will be required for an indefinite period, we ought to be seriously considering returning the administration of relief to the local governments—State and municipal. Otherwise, we shall find that the pressure upon the Federal Government to spend more and more for relief purposes will become steadily more insistent.

Testimony of the mayors before the Senate Unemployment Committee illustrates the way in which Federally administered relief tends to shift responsibility for care of the unemployed from the shoulders of the State and local authorities. Indeed, the stage is reached when local authorities now deny their responsibility in respect to such matters. As Mayor LaGuardia suggests, reductions in relief costs will never be effected so long as those who benefit by the spending of relief funds are encouraged to "feel closer to the Federal Government" than to the revenue-raising machinery of their own political units.

"It Is Happening Here."

When Secretary Ickes brought a vitriolic indictment against big business a fortnight ago one of his complaints was that "our business enterprises have infested their plants with spies." Now that a Senate committee has revealed extensive wire-tapping and espionage in his own department, Mr. Ickes is said to have protested against any "smear campaign."

Apparently smearing is a laudable practice when indulged in by Mr. Ickes but becomes vicious when turned against him. Despicable as industrial espionage is, it would be interesting to know whether any private employer with a force comparable to that presided over by Secretary Ickes has ever hired more persons to spy upon, investigate and tap the wires of its employes. Even Elbert K. Burlew, who Mr. Ickes now wants to be Assistant Secretary of the Interior, was snooped upon by this little O. G. P. U.

Some critics were inclined to believe that Mr. Ickes was seeing Fascists under the bed when he so recently insisted that "It Is Happening Here." Now it appears that the title of his address was highly appropriate. The report of his former chief sleuth to the Senate Committee on Public Lands has given Mr. Ickes unquestioned right to speak with authority on the employment of Nazi methods in this country.

A Hollywood star claims to have spells of sitting on a rock and brooding. She won't get any publicity out of this newspaper until she hatches out a better story than that.

A newspaperman is a person who never has time to read a book, but who thinks that within the next six months he'll find time to write one.

An Irish physician says good health is a disease. So far, so good. Now that this discovery has been made, medical science should get busy and make it contagious.

"What do you do with your money?" asks an insurance company. That's what our creditors would like to know.

"Surgeons Remove Sales Tax Token From Man's Lung."—Headline. Shucks, a tax collector could have made him cough it up.

According to a publisher, only a person who has suffered can write a modern novel. Read one, and you can write one.

Anatomically speaking, if nations would use their heads and get rid of their arms, they could soon get back on their feet.

The Seed Of Lynchings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Elderman's cartoon, "The Road Back," is one of his best for a long time. Drawings of this type elevate cartooning above the commonplace and make the artist one with the old masters—Goya, Daumier, Thomas Nast and Art Young (who is still kicking). Such art is worthy to hang beside the more pretentious efforts of brush and chisel, i. e., the cartoons of a Gropper or Orozco contain the same quality as a painting, engraving or sculpture, and destroy that fine line certain snobbish art critics draw between the "pure" art of dogwood blossoms in a vase and the so-called "ugly" art portraying the realities of life "across the tracks."

It is too bad that our civilization has not reached the stage of perfection where the message and social value of a cartoon like "The Road Back" is understood. A lyncher in California smells as bad as a lyncher in Georgia or Mississippi, and a Democrat who condones lynching is as uncivilized and brutal as the mob that carries the idea to its conclusion.

Southern statesmen have attempted to evade the issue by making inane observations concerning crime in the North. The issue is the abolition of lynching and has nothing whatever to do with crime in other sections of the Nation. Crime is the result of environment and poverty; lynching is also the result of poverty, but where crime is usually committed in large cities without any thought of race prejudice or even premeditation—lynching is usually organized and deliberately fomented as a crime against a particular race and class.

Two D. C. Problems.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Kindly permit me space in your paper to express my views relative to the two biggest problems that in my opinion confront the citizens and officials of the District, namely, traffic and crime conditions. Both of these problems are the cause for much anxiety, worry, unrest and alarm. Both have reached the point of seriousness. Both I regret to state, nevertheless it's a fact, are on the increase.

Drastic steps should be taken by the Commissioners of the District toward wiping out these evils. Heads of various branches and departments ought to be told to get busy quickly and do a good speedy job toward ridding our city of criminals, thugs and gangs. Our city, I regret to state, outranks many others in accidental deaths and crimes.

In my opinion it behooves the District Commissioners, the courts and the Police Department to wake up and accomplish results.

The Anti-lynching Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The strongest advocates of anti-lynching legislation know that such legislation will not prove to be a panacea for crime and mob violence. They would even admit that it is not the ideal way to cure the evil, which has so sorely vexed the consciences of all real Americans, both North and South, for more than a half century.

Legislation at its best, is a poor substitute for voluntary action in the interest of justice and fair play. If we were sure the passing of the anti-lynching bill would put an end to lynching, either out of fear for penalties involved, or because of sheer respect for the law, the problem would still be unsolved.

But we unequivocally favor the passing of such a law, not because we believe it will solve the problems of injustice and mob violence, or insure to the Negro those rights and privileges guaranteed by the Constitution, but rather because such an act would place the Federal Government itself on record as standing for equality before the law for all her citizens. This would restore, in a measure, the faith of 12 millions of her citizens in their country's claim of a single standard of justice and opportunity for all.

In my humble opinion, the ultimate solution of this problem will never be realized until there is developed throughout the Nation a sense of unity among all the people, seeking for and striving toward the abundant life for all—the objective of the founding fathers, the unfinished task of all real Americans.

Pedestrian's Dilemma.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Will some of the officials who are so solicitous of the welfare of jaywalkers advise one how to get from the sidewalk to a car loading platform located in the middle of the block without having a leg taken off by a speeding motorist?

Torturing Dogs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some days ago a friend called my attention to a description, in some of our daily papers, of the cutting of the spinal cords of a group of dogs to see what would happen, and asked what I thought of such practices. What I thought, after reading the article in The Post and a more detailed description elsewhere, is not entirely fit for publication, but I should like to take this opportunity to voice a protest which I am sure is shared by all dog lovers.

The answer to any objections raised to the inhuman practices carried on by vivisectors is usually that the animals are under the influence of anesthetics and that such experiments are necessary for the welfare of human beings. In the experiment in question the reader might wonder how an insensible dog, as stated in one account, although "unable to control the movement of one of its paws, could see, hear, smell and taste," and the writer wishes the article had gone a little further and explained just how humanity is to be benefited by this information.

Those who are interested in this line of medical research would enjoy reading, from the pages of the Journal of the American Medical Association, the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, the American Journal of Physiology and similar publications detailed accounts of animals being disemboweled, almost frozen, half cooked, nearly starved while tantalized with the sight and smell of food, fed on unnatural diet, strangled, afflicted with convulsions, subjected to shell shock, infected with disease, legs broken, and divers and sundry other devices for satisfying scientific curiosity, through experiments made, not once, but scores of times, and often repeated on the same helpless animals as long as they are unfortunate enough to survive. The torture of the bull in the Spanish arena, from the knives thrust into his quivering flesh by the gallant torreador is mild in comparison.

GERTRUDE E. MACKENZIE.

China And Ethiopia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I do not agree with Quentin Lewis of East Falls Church that the United States was unconcerned about Ethiopia. Our Government was very concerned, but a terrific and calamitous depression was upon us at the time. Furthermore, the Chinese are far worthier and more progressive; they are not naturally as warlike as the Ethiopians.

Ethiopia, being a small country (in population, at least), being warlike and very backward in using its potential wealth, caused the large democracies to be hopeful that Italy would be satisfied thereafter, just as they hoped Japan was satisfied after taking Manchuria. We hoped to avoid war.

Another thing, many more Americans are directly affected in this Chinese aggression around the big cities and, too, an American warship has been sunk and many insults thrown by Japanese to America. Italy did no such things.

Business Leadership.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How long will big industrialists succeed in pulling wool over the eyes of some of the people by advancing quack remedies for depression while carefully hiding its real causes?

These tycoons of big business want us to believe that, with their fears removed and their confidence restored, they can increase production and so bring about a return to prosperity.

Almost any schoolboy knows that profitable production is necessarily limited to accord with consumptive capacity. Therefore, increasing production without first increasing the capacity to consume, as measured by mass purchasing power, is like feeding more whisky to a man already drunk.

What this country needs is more constructive leadership in business and less propaganda designed to preserve the unwarranted privileges enjoyed by certain small groups.

The South No Outcast.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There appeared in your paper of January 12 a ringing denunciation of the antilynching bill as a hark back to the period of Reconstruction. Senators looked upon it as a harbinger of strife and discord riviving sectionalism and tending to split the Democratic Party. Speaker of the House Byrnes was even moved to call the South "the political outcast" of the Nation.

Let us look at the facts. For seven years prohibition was kept on the statute books, after its failure had been demonstrated, through Southern influence. The child labor amendment remains unratified because the South refuses to abridge the rights of youngsters to work, thus accomplishing at one stroke a preservation of the individual's right of contract and maintaining a large labor reserve. Likewise any wage-hour bill is likely to suffer extensive eviscertation, so much so as to almost nullify its effects, in order to meet Southern requirements; for these statesmen see that by doing so they are securing for their section a favored position insofar as industry is concerned.

On the other hand, this section has lost nothing as a result of legislation. Any scheme of crop-control has considered and will first of all consider cotton; any distribution of Federal funds, grants or aid for roads, schools, relief, flood-control or drought is at least equitable to the South. And the very men who prate so freely of democracy are sent to Congress by a number of votes that any modern dictator would be frankly ashamed to publicize. This results from the utilization of poll tax laws that operate to bar a great number of poor whites as well as the Negroes at whom they are aimed. And if one must talk about loyalty, what about the South in 1928?

Senator Borah made a comment on the fact that the Negro is faced with practically insurmountable difficulties in securing placement in civil service positions. Perhaps the South is not to be blamed for this; on the other hand, no bar of sectionalism operates to keep the Southerner out of any position. He has entree everywhere, preference even. In every branch of the services, in every department of the Government, in administrative, judicial and legislative positions his course is free and his career is limited only by his abilities. This is certainly not the position of "outcasts."

The remarks of the eminent statesmen calling the South an outcast and asserting that the Negro is attempting to control the Democratic Party are patently absurd.

Joe's Job.

I NEVER did find out his name and probably never will, for I rather suspect that the man who gave us one of those mumbling, somewhat uncertain introductions was not overburdened with confidence that he knew it. However, that may be, we had a pretty good conversation on general topics under way before our friend had to depart and his amiability was such that I was inclined to linger awhile. So to identify him with the somewhat startling disclosures which followed we will call him Joe.

Joe evinced a polite interest in my occupation when, in response to his question, I told him what it is, but he was able to retain his composure. And then there came into his eyes a rather faraway look as though he sensed that immediately I would inquire about his calling. Of course I did. He replied without haste and likewise without hesitation, in a somewhat flat monotone, looking straight ahead, but not at me. In a crematorium, quite distant from Washington, he is the man who literally turns on the heat.

* * * *

For a moment my composure did a comprehensive imitation of that legendary figure who flung himself upon a horse and rode off in all directions. But I knew it would never do to allow him to perceive I was at all disconcerted, and I made myself say, with studied calm:

"Very interesting."

"Oh yes," he said, a trifle wearily, I thought, and the conversation came to a dead halt. I rummaged around in my consciousness, which was by now beginning to show signs of returning to normalcy, and I began to wonder what his title might be. It ought to be rather an impressive one, I felt.

When I learned from Joe that he was designated merely as the engineer of the crematorium I began to feel much more at ease and again living in a world of reality.

Cremation has made great strides in the United States in recent years, I suggested, keeping steadily before me that sage counsel of Dale Carnegie that to negotiate a few leagues up toward the heights of happiness and success one must always show complete absorption in matters vitally affecting the other fellow. He agreed in that same monotone and then, as though he felt constrained to enlighten the untutored on the subject, he said:

"Like most crematories, ours is part of a cemetery. Five years ago about 7 out of every 100 burials were cremations. Today there are 15, more than double the total in that short space of time."

Joe did not attempt to account dogmatically for the rapid upswing. It might be that more people are coming to regard cremation as the more satisfactory way of disposing of all that is mortal, he ventured. The element of economy might have some bearing on the trend. But there are also certain deterrents. One of the important brakes on the spread of cremation is some sectarian frowning upon the method. This, however, is not general. Many church denominations offer no objection or prohibition.

* * * *

As for the economy aspect, Joe informed me that, in general, cremation costs about half as much as ground burial. Speaking only of the institution to which he is attacher, he said the cremation fee was $40 with another $40 tacked on for what I innocently called an urn but which he technically designated the "bowl" for the ashes. Thus with ground burial costing $80, at least, cremation can be bought for half that if the "bowl" is not purchased and the crematory permitted to dispose of the ashes in whatever way it sees fit.

Do many mourning families or other survivors do this, I inquired, and was just a little startled when Joe told me they do. I recalled reading of instances in which ashes are carefully and reverently transported from crematories for the carrying out of last expressed wishes of the departed that they be flung on the wide waters of the ocean or scattered from the clouds via airplane.

In what class is cremation advancing most rapidly, I asked Joe and without hesitation he replied:

"The rich."

I learned from Joe that ordinarily mourners are not present at cremations and that when they are, they are almost invariably of the lower income brackets. Cremations, accomplished behind a thick glass wall by strong jets of flames from heavy oil, take place at night, sometimes as many as seven or eight occurring after sundown. The crematory rule is that a mechanical pipe organ shall play hymns for five minutes at each cremation but all other religious rites have been concluded before the body reaches the crematory. Twenty minutes are required for complete incineration.

Well, I don't know, I began to think I had found out all I wanted to know about cremation for the moment. After all, I have only an academic interest in the subject. So I said:

"You like Washington? This is your first visit, I believe you said."

"Yes, indeed, but it is so hard to see all the things you want to see in a short space of time," Joe said and his manner brightened. I learned then, when I asked, that Joe came here because he just thought he'd like to get away from the crematorium for a few days. What was his sight-seeing program for the rest of the day? Well, he thought he might take a run out to a crematorium not far from here, of which he had heard.

Economic Royalists.

NOBODY has ever put a finger on the exact spot where Mr. Roosevelt is a pain in the neck to a large proportion of those Americans whom he describes as economic royalists and well-fed clubmen.

PEGLER.

The element of rich men whom I have in mind are members of the Horatio Alger school who started from scratch as typical, one-gallus, Whitcomb Riley barefoot boys. They got their rudimentary knowledge in a one-room or two-room schoolroom, learned swimming in Goose Crick, split kindling, pumped and carried water by hand and in their high school years sold papers, worked in quarries, laid paving blocks, mowed lawns, shoveled snow and coal and dragged out ashes.

In every possible way they hustled to make an honest quarter or a dollar, always with the ambition to become successful or, in a coarser word, rich. College in those days was for the rich or uncommonly studious and dogged poor, and the college boy of Mr. Roosevelt's own class, backed by rich parents, was known somewhat contemptuously as a rah-rah or a Chauncey and was depicted in the comic papers with a big, fuzzy chrysanthemum in his lapel and sucking the handle of his walking stick.

Horatio Alger was the most popular boys' author of the time, and, like some of our most opulent fiction writers of today, he wrote the same story over and over. It was called "Bound to Rise," "Dick Mordaunt's Career" or "Upward and Onward," but it was always the story of the boy with the widowed mother or no parents at all who worked hard, suffered much, conquered temptation, and in the last chapter wore a gold watch and chain. The hero was an insufferable little prig, and nobody ever tried to copy his morals, but his success was dream stuff and he was the inspiration of many men who are now either rich or quite well to do and who got that way playing the game according to the rules which were unanimously recognized and against heavy odds.

MANY OF THEM had to quit school early to take the responsibility of supporting their mothers and younger brothers and sisters, and when at last they met the one and only and decided to get married they moved into a boarding house or furnished room or rented a little house or flat furnished up with installment plan furniture and bought at extortionate rates of interest.

Mr. Roosevelt himself never spent a day in a public school in all his life. The public schools never were and are not now good enough for the Roosevelts, and when Mr. Roosevelt had done with nurses and tutors he went to a dude school called Groton, which prepared him for Harvard, and after he had married and had taken his bride for a honeymoon tour of England, France, Italy and Germany they returned home in time for him to go to Columbia Law School.

"My mother-in-law," writes Mrs. Roosevelt in her book, "had taken a house with us. She had furnished it and engaged our servants."

Later, Mrs. Roosevelt writes, "for a while we had, as waitress, my father and mother's waitress," and, again, "during the next few years we observed in summer much the same routine. We visited my mother-in-law at Hyde Park for a time and then went up to stay with her at Campobello. Ordinarily my husband sailed up and down the coast in the little schooner Half Moon and took perhaps one or two short cruises."

In 1908 the President's mother thought their little house too small and therefore bought a plot in New York and built another for them. Later she also bought and gave to Franklin Roosevelt and his young wife an estate on Campobello Island, including a house completely furnished even to china, glass and linens.

* * * *

FOR MR. ROOSEVELT to sail his own schooner around Fundy when he had never yet assumed the task of supporting his own family unassisted was all right, but let some other man cock over his eye a funny cap and toss off such words as "Ahoy!" "Port!" and "Starboard!" on a yacht bought with his own money in enjoyment of his own success and he is not merely ridiculous but an enemy of the great common people of whom the President is paradoxically one.

There are those who call Mr. Roosevelt a traitor to his class, but that cry comes from the hereditary rich who grew up endowed and, as he did, looked to their mothers and fathers for support and luxuries long after they had ceased to be children. The class that I have in mind take pride in having made their own way. They are proud to have taken care of their own parents in their old age, and every crack from him about well-fed clubmen and economic royalists evokes from them the soul-satisfying and contemptuous taunt, "mama's boy."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

It's An Idea!

Miami, Fla.—Don't ever speak of the first, second or third race any more. It's ever so plebeian. Mr. Joe Widener has introduced a new note in racing and all races at Hialeah are programmed and announced as the "two o'clock race," the "two-thirty o'clock race," etc.

* * * *

It's the sensation of the Bagdad on the Gulf Stream.

* * * *

"What do you like in the three o'clock?" asks "Muggsy" Hennihan, trying to be as upsy-duppety as anybody else.

"Not a thing," replies the Punk, "but I'll have something good in the half-after-four."

"Is that daylight-saving time?" demands "Muggsy."

* * * *

You give a friend a tip on a horse and he demands, "In the what o'clock is he running?"

* * * *

In fact, the idea is spreading all over the track. We ran across a disturbed fan tearing up his mutuel tickets and muttering, "I played the wrong hour."

* * * *

And an old friend who always spoke of his first and second drink of the day now says, "It must be an hour since I had my two o'clocker. Will you join me in a cooling three-fifteen with ginger ale?"

* * * *

Mr. Widener is always striving for the rarified atmosphere, but this season he has gone the limit to be different, even substituting a golden ball for the traditional "red board" and erecting a new "tote" board in the infield in such pale and delicate tints that only the lorgnette holders can read it.

* * * *

The lofty mood is sweeping the place. Harry Stevens now calls a hot dog a "frankfurter and muffin" and bills his corned beef and cabbage as "brisket of beef gardenier."

* * * *

Nobody asks "Whaddaya know?" any more. They inquire, "I beg pardon, sir, but to what extent are you informed?" And instead of "Whaddaya hear, buddy?" it is now "What's audible, my good fellow?"

* * * *

Elmer Twitchell says he thinks even the horses are stiffer.

* * * *

We doubt this. They are not performing exactly to form but a horse has to get used to an exotic place like Hialeah. Some of them have been running all year in those one-quart-of-paint-and-a-flower-pot tracks and when they suddenly run smack into all this botanical beauty they think it's a wedding or a Mardi Gras and Go on Their Dignity.

The Optimist.

Henry Ford again says that an era of great prosperity is ahead of America. Maybe it's just due to the fact that no hill is too steep for Henry any more.

Palestine Today

Observer Finds Diverse Elements In Holy Land Slowly Binding Together Under Flux Of Language And Origin.

The Post presents the first of four articles discussing the present problems and future outlook of Palestine.

By C. Poznanski.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Jerusalem.

PALESTINE, according to the Balfour Declaration, was to become "the Jewish national home." The Zionist leader, Dr. Weizmann, when asked at the peace conference by Mr. Lansing what was meant by this phrase, replied: "To build up something in Palestine which will be as Jewish as England is English." The Peel Report and the statement of policy of the British government went one step further. A part of Palestine was to become a Jewish state.

The first question, therefore, which confronts a visitor to Palestine is how close the Jewish nation in Palestine has approached reality. Is it comparable to the English or, better still, to the American Nation? How far have Jews from different countries, speaking different languages, having different habits, been unified or are capable of being unified into a homogeneous whole?

First of all, some approximate figures may be cited. Out of the 400,000 Jews in Palestine, about 50 per cent came from Poland. Then there are about 100,000 Russian Jews, some 40,000 of German origin, about 20,000 Yemenites, about 20,000 so-called Sephardites (Levantine Jews), about 10,000 Oriental Jews coming from Bukhara, Persia, Afghanistan, Kurdistan, a few thousand Hungarian and Balkan Jews and a few thousand Jews coming from America.

It must be added that among the Polish and Russian Jews a considerable proportion speaks Yiddish and that some 40,000 to 50,000 are strictly orthodox, wearing long beards, locks and kaftans. For these, Palestine is, first of all, the Holy Land and not the national home.

If one walks in the streets of Jerusalem, Tel Aviv or Haifa, it is precisely this diversity of origin and character, this Tower of Babel character of these towns which first attracts attention. The Yemenites, speaking Arabic and wearing Arabic dress; the Bukharians and other Oriental Jews speaking the languages and wearing the dresses of their countries, live in Jerusalem in separate quarters of the town, where they conserve their age-old habits. The orthodox Jews of Poland transported to Jerusalem the ghettos of small Polish towns. The Sephardites, speaking Spanish or Spaniol (a language bearing the same relation to Spanish as Yiddish to German), live also more or less separated from the other Jewish population.

And in the main streets of the big towns, although one hears much German and Polish and a certain amount of Russian and Yiddish, there is hardly any Hebrew, notwithstanding that signs on shops are in Hebrew. On the newspaper stands of Haifa roughly 50 per cent of the periodicals are in German, coming from Vienna, Prague and Paris (the newspapers of Hitlerian Germany naturally do not appear in the streets, though in every cafe one finds the Frankfurter Zeitung), about 30 per cent of the newspapers in Polish (most Jewish papers are published in Polish or Yiddish), some Hungarian papers, one or two English or French, and hardly 20 per cent Palestinian Hebrew papers.

Even in the corridors and offices of the Jewish Agency, Hebrew is by no means the unique language. And if one talks to people in the towns he soon realizes that for the majority of them the bonds with their country of origin remain very strong, that they are often as much interested in what happens on the other side of the Mediterranean as in what is happening in Palestine. There is, for many of them, a kind of double patriotism.

Nevertheless the question of whether there can be in Palestine a Jewish nation as Jewish as England is English, must be answered in the affirmative.

Sense Of Common Origin Seen As Cohesive Agent.

FIRST OF ALL, there is naturally a strong feeling of common origin. Bukharians or Sephardites, Jews from Poland or from Russia know inwardly that notwithstanding their differences they are all Jews. Of course, this sentiment of common origin would be hardly sufficient to create a modern nation, especially since the tie is more religious than natural between the strictly orthodox Jews of Europe and the East. It has nevertheless its importance.

There is, secondly, the tie of the common language—Hebrew, which nearly all Palestinians know, even if they continue to speak the language of their country of origin.

But the most important of all, there are three centers which are forming a conscious Jewish nation in Palestine. First are the schools. Before the war the Jewish schools in Palestine were French—the schools of the Alliance Israelite—or German—the schools of the Hilfsverein. Hebrew was taught only as a dead language, like Latin in European schools. In 1913 the pupils of the schools of the Hilfsverein revolted and asked that all subjects should be taught in Hebrew. The Hilfsverein refused, but the pupils remained obstinate and finally the Zionist organization took over these schools, and Hebrew became the official language.

After the war the Zionist organization retained control of the entire education system in Palestine. It meant an expenditure which could have been transferred to the mandatory power, but it also meant the possibility of molding in the schools the soul of the future Jewish nation. The attempt succeeded. The youth who goes through the Palestine schools speaks Hebrew as a colloquial language; moreover, he has a profound and exclusive Jewish patriotism. For him there is no fatherland but Palestine, no other national sentiment than the Jewish sentiment. The differences of origin do not play an important role.

Collective Farms Also Strong Unifying Factor.

THE SECOND unifying factor is constituted by the kibutzim and kvucas, i. e., by the collective farms which constitute a distinctive feature of Palestine.

They were first created by the emigration of Russian Jews after the revolution of 1905. These young revolutionaries tried to realize in Palestine their Socialist ideals. There is no organization in the whole world—Soviet Russia not excluded—more communistic than these farms. There is no private property—not even in books—nor any pocket money. Each member is bound to work, and each receives all that he needs from the community. But these former intellectuals, who are today workmen and peasants, did not come to Palestine only to realize their socialist ideal. They came also with a quite definite Jewish national ideal—they came to build the Jewish nation. And in the kibutzim—new ones are constantly being created, as this method of colonization is less costly than individual farms—one does not hear any language but Hebrew, and there has already developed a pure Jewish peasantry.

The third element of unification is the industrial proletariat and its syndical organization, the Histadruth. As in the case of the peasantry, this proletariat is mostly of nonproletarian origin. To say nothing of the Communists, who are the deadly enemies of the Zionists, the largest Jewish Socialist party—the Bund—is anti-Zionist. And in general a skilled worker does not emigrate unless he is sure to find a suitable job.

Thus one finds among the manual workers in Palestine many who had been small shopkeepers or artisans, even many intellectuals. It is far from exceptional to find skilled workers in factories dominantly of proletarian origin, while among the unskilled hands doctors, lawyers and students may be met. Incidentally the plethora of the intelligentsia in Palestine is a most serious problem.

But what is important is precisely that this new class has a strong national, even nationalistic feelings, for the workers, as for the peasants and the students there is only one nationality—the Jewish—one language—Hebrew. Thus there is today in Palestine the nuclei for a modern Jewish nation. These nuclei are not strong enough to melt into one nation all the new immigrants. Immigrants above 30 years of age will continue to be tied to the country they came from. But the young people who are coming to Palestine and, above all, the future generation, will be able to make Dr. Weizmann's statement true.

Two qualifications must be made. For the Oriental Jews with their quite different habits the period of assimilation will be much longer, three or four generations perhaps, though for the very intelligent Yemenites who have begun already to assimilate themselves with the European Jews this period might be shorter.

The second is more important. To mold a nation a mold is needed. This mold can only be a Palestine or a part of it where Jewish influence is decisive. And this raises the problem of the future of Palestine.

Wesley's Way

By Fred G. Holloway,

President, Western Maryland College.

M. Piette's Admirable Biography.

A ROMAN CATHOLIC SCHOLAR has written a volume that will be a standard reference so long as John Wesley is an object of study and research. He has done his task with consummate skill and all Protestantism will be thankful for this impartial, sympathetic and erudite study. This reviewer's contacts with French Catholic scholarship have been limited, but such authors as Maritain and Lagrange (whose works on the New Testament deserve an English translation) have given him high respect for it which this present book confirms.

The book is a particular study of the Founder of Methodism. It is more than a life of the Great Reformer. It is a biography that places Wesley in his right position in the evolution of Protestantism. The first 200 pages of the book give a brief but graphic account of the Reformation. The influence of Zwingli and Luther (some will object to the author's treatment of Luther) and Calvin is vividly portrayed. It is written, as history should be written, by one who has made a first-hand study of the sources and who knows how to present the salient facts in a clear and succinct way. High importance is given to the influence of Calvinistic thought on the whole Protestant movement.

* * * *

OF SPECIAL VALUE is the account of the various religious sects in England from the time of Henry VIII on. The decay of religion and morals go hand in hand. Puritan influence goes to its legislative extreme to combat current evils, but in vain. General decay in social standards and personal morality follows. The dissident sects of Protestant England are unable to cope with the situation. England is in a bad way and continental Europe as well. The Pietistic movement in Germany is salutary in its influence. But something more far-reaching must take place if the European world is to be shaken from its moral and religious lethargy.

This is the role of John Wesley. In the remainder of the book the author takes us through the life of this Great Reformer. The religious heritage which was his has been the burden of the first part of the book. Now he writes of the influence of his father and mother. The latter has been called the "mother of Methodism." This, writes Piette, "is no mere catch phrase—a metaphor denied of truth" but "a well-founded title." His portrait of Wesley's mother is especially clear and accurate.

* * * *

BUT HOW CAN we continue a detailed account of this unusual narrative in so brief a compass? Suffice it to say that the reader is carried through the remainder of the book with an interpretation of Wesley that is clear and forceful. An effort is made to give adequate interpretation to Wesley's inner life and those experiences and attitudes which made him what he never suspected he would be, the founder of a new religious sect.

The final section of the book is a study of the growth of Methodism and its place in the Protestant world of today.

* * * *

THE AUTHOR has done his task so unusually well that we hesitate to offer any adverse judgment. But M. Piette has not, I think, given adequate explanation to Wesley's religious life. His dissatisfaction with himself must be understood as a vicarious experience in which he recognizes the low moral life of his contemporaries. He bemoans the sin of his contemporaries, and his own sense of sin is accentuated. His was an experience like Isaiah's: "I am an unclean man and dwell in the midst of an unclean people." The heightening of his own religious life sends him out to transform his contemporaries whose immorality had the more impressed him with his own deficiencies.

The historian must view his task objectively. It is that which gives him a right sense of perspective. But the historian who must view a religious movement objectively may be at some loss in the understanding of a religion subjectively. This is evident in M. Piette's summary of the results of the Methodist movement and the position of the modern Methodist. He recognizes fully that Wesleyanism is not a new theology, but he fails to see that it is primarily an attitude. Modern Methodism can carry on, blazing new trails which ostensibly do not coincide with the methods of their founder, but they do coincide with his attitude.

* * * *

THE BOOK suffers for lack of an index. This is in measure offset by copious notes and a bibliography that approaches perfection. Here is a volume that makes a distinct contribution to Protestant religion in general, John Wesley in particular. I should not doubt that many Methodists in reading it will say: "A Roman Catholic scholar has written the finest book on John Wesley yet to appear."

The Panda Hunt

"THE LADY AND THE PANDA," by Ruth Harkness. (Carrick & Evans, $2.50.)

There once was a lady designer,
Who explored the jungles of China.
She returned with a panda,
A baby one, and a ——— 6

* * * *

WELL, IF YOU'VE FOLLOWED the rotogravure pictures of the past year, you must know about Su Lin, the giant panda, whose social career has been nothing short of remarkable. Deserted at birth in a hollow tree in the mountains of western China by an errant mother, adopted by an American dress designer, introduced to the elect of Shanghai and Manhattan, Su Lin is now, at the age of one a half, perhaps the most famous inmate of the Brookfield Zoo, Chicago.

* * * *

THE STORY BEGINS long before Su Lin herself was born, when Mrs. Harkness inherited a panda-hunting expedition from her husband. Knowing little about exploring, and nothing about pandas, Mrs. Harkness gave up her dress designing in New York and departed for the Orient.

The rest of her tale is a monument to beginner's luck. In China she met a young explorer who wanted to go panda-hunting and who knew a little about the animals. Being himself Chinese, he acted as interpreter as well as commander of the expedition. In the mountains they realized that even if they should find a live specimen, they would have no way of transporting its 300 pounds down perilous trails and over swinging bamboo bridges. Fortunately, their specimen turned out to be a baby, small enough to be cradled in two hands.

* * * *

THE EXPEDITION was anything but scientific. The same thing is true of the book. It is a sprightly account of a personal adventure, full of the author's observations of a variety of people and landscapes. A baby giant panda may be a zoological phenomenon to the curator of Brookfield Zoo, but to Mrs. Harkness and her audience Su Lin is primarily a "little bit of something very cute," a baby who has to be fed in the middle of the night, who bubbles her milk and gets the colic and learns to walk like any other less famous infant.

Cab Drivers Talk Shop.

THERE ARE more than a couple of places around town where they hang out, but the restaurant at Thirteenth and H streets, is a favorite. They begin to congregate after the theater rush in the half hour before midnight, and though you'll find law students and one-time accountants in their ranks, the talk is usually shop talk. They're all cab drivers.

McCARTHY.

It may take them a little while to get warmed up, but when one of them starts the ball rolling they're all good for another round of black coffee and the chance of adding their dime's worth to the conversation.

"Well, sir," said the big fellow who drove his own cab, "I really drew a sour one tonight." Spoons poised above cups and the gab fest was on.

"She was a lady about 45 years old," the independent cabbie said, "and she gives me a hail above Florida avenue on Fourteenth. I pull over and toss open the door."

The story wasn't getting to the point very quickly so the rest of the boys turned back to plates of scrambled eggs and bowls of chili. But they left one ear cocked for the independent cabbie's story.

"But she doesn't get in," the big fellow said. "She stands there poking her head inside the door. Then she says, 'Well, it looks clean.'

"Then she ups and asks me am I a careful driver." The big fellow paused momentarily to guide a slab of apple pie toward his mouth.

"Well," he continued, "I told her that I was careful. And then she wants to know how fast I drive. Well about that time I started to get mad." The other drivers nodded understandingly.

"Lady," I told her, "I drive within the speed limit." And he looked as self-righteous as a man possibly could with a mouth full of apple pie. But one of the other drivers started to chuckle.

"But this is the pay-off," the big fellow said. "I asks her if she's going to get in or not. And then she looks at me very carefully and says, 'Young man, do you drink?'

"Did you tell her off?" the Premier driver, with the scrambled eggs, wanted to know.

"Did I tell her off?" the big fellow said. "I didn't tell her off. I was very polite.

"'M'am,' I said, thank you very much for your kind offer, but I never touch a drop during business hours. However, I have no objection to your taking one if you want to."

The big fellow's remark to the effect that he lost a passenger was drowned in an explosion, as coffee turned well meant chuckles into a series of snorts and gulps.

* * * *

BUT THAT started it, and from then on no holds were barred. The Diamond cabbie with the ice cream and pie told about the lady who refused to get into the cab because she could smell cigarette smoke. And an independent driver moaned about the passenger that made him turn off the radio in the ninth round of a broadcast of a close fight.

But, judging from the stories, the worst offender in the eyes of a Washington cab driver is the drunk who becomes coy and refuses to tell where he wants to go.

"Sometimes," the driver of a Premier cab said, "you have to be a regular detective. They give you the name of a street and a number and when you get there you find they don't live any place near there. They live on the other side of town in an apartment that has the same name as the street they sent you to."

They were pretty much agreed that a cab driver's worst enemy is the part-time driver.

"I've been a union man myself," one of the drivers said, "but when some of these guys in the building trades, who get 14 and 15 bucks a day when they work, take out hacker's licenses and compete with us the three days a week they don't work, it burns me up."

* * * *

WORST PERSONAL affront in the eyes of representative Washington hackers is being "cut out" of a job by another cab.

"I get a hail, see," said the Diamond driver. "I pull up and make a U-turn to pick up the passenger, and just about the time I'm getting turned around some other bird breezes up and takes the fare. Where do you think that leaves me, huh?"

When a driver recognizes the driver who cut him out on a job like that, there is likely to be trouble in the after-work hours.

Best spot in town, according to all the drivers, is the cab stand in front of the Mayflower. No cab association has the concession on it, and it's fair game for all of them.

"The advantage of that spot," one of the drivers said, "is that the law of averages gives you a real job out of there. They move them out on an average of almost two a minute, and about every twentieth job is a real one. Maybe a trip to Baltimore or Mount Vernon."

And then one guy stood up and said that he'd quit for the night when he'd made another dollar. And that started the exodus. The gab fest was over.

Fight to Change Cotton Control Lost by South

Senate Compromise Plan Plans Production at 10,600,000 Bales.

By the Associated Press.

State agriculture officials apparently have failed in their efforts to obtain sweeping changes in cotton provisions of the new crop control legislation.

Chairman Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said yesterday that congressional conferees had agreed upon a cotton program "compromising between House and Senate bills."

He said this compromise fixed cotton production for this year at 10,600,000 bales and limited benefit payments for cotton growers to the amount of funds previously available under the soil conservation act.

Spokesmen for Southern commissioners of agriculture previously had asked the Senate Agriculture Committee to fix production for this year at 13,000,000 bales and increase benefit payments, by a processing tax on cotton and textiles, or by diverting funds from customs receipts.

"They have a good proposition," Smith said, "but of course, we can't incorporate it in the granary bill."

He explained the conference committee was limited to matter contained in the bills approved by the House and Senate at the special session.

Unanimous opposition to these bills had been expressed by the Southern State farm leaders in a resolution which described the granary measures as "totally inadequate to cope with the present distressing condition of the cotton producers."

Conferees pushed ahead, however, with their job of trying to agree on a single bill. They hoped to get a report ready for Congress late this week.

Smith said the conference group had accepted a penalty of $10 a bale, 2 cents a pound, for cotton sales in excess of quotas, as provided by the House Bill.

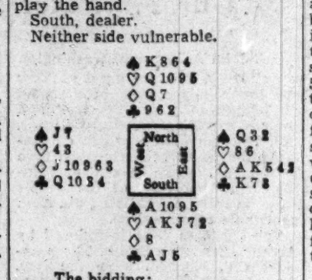
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Don't BeToo Easily Satisfied!

We should not be satisfied that we have selected the correct trump suit until we have explored all the possibilities of the hand. Merely because our best suit has been supported directly by partner is no reason to assume that there can be no better denomination in which to play the hand.

South, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

South obviously felt that with his great honor trick strength and good distribution, game should be a "cinch" in hearts, after his partner had supported the suit. Looking at South's hand, I might make the same estimate. But it does not follow that my bidding would take the same course.

As actually played, on the opening lead of a diamond and continuation, South had to lose not three, but four tricks, namely, one diamond, one spade and two clubs.

Although, as I have said, I would feel that game in hearts was very likely, holding South's hand, I would take the precaution to explore one other possibility. Instead of jumping from two hearts to four, South should have made the strong, and obviously exploratory, bid of two spades. Since this would be "a reverse." North would know that South had a strong hand. The worst that could happen would be that North would go back to three hearts and then South, of course, should bid four. With North's actual holding, however, and his knowledge that it is better to play with a trump suit divided 4-4 than one divided 5-4, North would raise the spades to three. Thus, four spades, instead of four hearts, would become the final contract. And against four spades the defense would have been very difficult, involving an opening diamond lead and an immediate shift to clubs. Otherwise, one of dummy's clubs would find a safe haven on South's long heart and, finally, North could ruff a club for the tenth trick.

Roosevelt Vetoes Aid to Charwomen

President Roosevelt Monday vetoed a bill to increase the pay of charmen and and charwomen in the custodial service of the Post-office Department.

He cited three objections to the measure, the gist of which was that it gave preferential treatment to a single group of employes. A new measure has been introduced in the Senate to make the increase in wages for charwomen applicable to such employes in the custodial service of all Federal departments.

House Passes Bill To Allow Pictures Of Postage Stamps

The House Monday passed the bill to permit the printing of black and white illustrations of United States and foreign postage stamps for philatelic purposes yesterday. An identical bill has passed the Senate.

A law to allow for illustration of United States postage stamps in the newspapers, albums and philatelic literature has been urged for more than 20 years, but it was not until the Treasury and Postoffice Departments came to an agreement that no harm would result that bills booked by the Administration were presented to Congress.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Recognition.

Pointing pridefully to merit system progress in 1937 (five States, three counties and 28 cities adopted comprehensive merit systems during the year), the Civil Service Assembly of the United States and Canada feels it should give credit where due. You will be glad to know that the accolades, as the Assembly has placed them, come to some eight Federal departments or agencies. We quote the reasons for the Assembly's recognition:

"The United States Civil Service Commission for furthering the use of general eligible registers, such as those for junior civil service examiner and social science analyst, as a step toward the development of research and administrative careers in the Federal service . . . The United States Bureau of Census, the Department of Agriculture and the Farm Credit Administration for their effective programs of in-service personnel activities . . .

"The Home Owners' Loan Corporation for its courage in stimulating the establishment of a group medical plan for its employes . . . The Department of Labor for its progressive step in establishing a personnel office . . . The Social Security Board for its constructive assistance to State and local welfare agencies in the establishment of effective personnel policies and practices . . . The United States Employment Service for its influence and help in improving personnel standards in the State employment services and for the excellent job descriptions prepared as a part of its occupational research program.

Otherwise, the National Civil Service Reform League, the National League of Women Voters, many people and many institutions from the Atlantic to the Pacific BUT, so far as we could find, there was not even a mention for Representative Robert Ramspeck.

WHAT'S GOING ON: The West Virginia State Society meets tomorrow night for dancing at the Raleigh Hotel, honoring the Congressional delegation from their State. Holt, Representative and Mrs. Jennings Randolph, Representative and Mrs. Robert L. Ramsey, Representative and Mrs. Andrew Edmiston, Representative and Mrs. John Kee, Representative and Mrs. Joe L. Smith and Representative and Mrs. George W. Johnson. John W. Smith, chairman of the reception committee, will be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Morgan, Judge and Mrs. A. Judson Findley, Miss Mayme Hamrick, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Nunnally, Miss Bertha Duncan, Mrs. Edith Echols, Mr. and Mrs. Lyman R. Van Knight, Mrs. J. C. Burchinal, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas W. Cain and Mrs. Sada C. Shinn. Dancing will be from 10 to 1.

The South Carolina Society gives a reception and dance tomorrow evening at the Shoreham in honor of Fay Desportes, minister to Guatemala, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Adams. Adams is now on duty at the State Department, having recently returned from China, where he was consul general at Hankow and Harbin. The society will meet at 8:30 for election of officers. The reception will begin at 9:15. Dancing will begin at 10. The floor committee consists of Col. Jeter R. Horton, Capt. Frank Jervey, Edward P. Hodges (Justice); Eugene Parker (Internal Revenue), Joseph Cheatham (Agriculture), Ed Liles (RFC) and Joseph T. Camp. Reception committee: J. Austin Latimer (Housing Division, PWA), Charles M. Galloway (GAO), James A. Hoyt (RFC), Mrs. Heywood Mehon, Mrs. Allard H. Gasque, Mrs. James P. Richards, Mrs. Edgar Morris, Miss Louise Lanville, Miss Sarah Marcum and Mrs. Charles E. Jackson. The A. F. G. E. dance in observance of National Civil Service Week, will be held tonight at the Raleigh Hotel. The event is informal. The Bureau of Engraving and Printing Orchestra will furnish music—beginning at 9 p. m. and ending at 1 a. m. . . . Dan Kessler, U. F. W. A. field organizer in Cleveland and Detroit and a product of Agriculture Local No. 2, speaks on "Labor Unity" which, of courrsre, currently doesn't exist) at the local's meeting at 8 o'clock tonight in the U. F. W. A. national office, 532 Seventeenth street northwest . . .

A. F. G. E. Aide.

Former Representative Scott Leavitt, of Montana, has hooked up with the A. F. G. E., joining at the national offices as a member-at-large. He said he would soon organize a lodge in Milwaukee, whee he is head of the Forestry office, directing forestry work in seven States. He is widely acquainted here, having served several terms in Congress. At present he is interested in a bill to have the FBI deal with all cases where Federal employes are killed or assaulted while on duty.

Just recently, he points out, a CCC worker was shot to death while engaged in making a forest map in Wisconsin, presumably murdered by a poacher who mistook him for a game warden. Leavitt says that prosecution will be facilitated and culprits apprehended more quickly if the nation-wide organization of the FBI can deal with such cases.

The Civil Service Commission announces examinations for: Motor truck driver, 50 cents an hour when actually employed, Government Fuel Yard, procurement division, Treasury. Employment depends upon the seasonal activities of the coal business. Applicants must not be more than 48 years of age. The closing date is January 31 . . . Principal plant physiologist, $5,600, Bureau of Plant Industry. The closing date is February 14 . . . Fire cooperation specialist, $3,800, U. S. Forest Service. The closing date is February 14.

The January meeting of the District of Columbia Suffrage Association will be held in the board room of the District Building at 8 o'clock Friday evening. It is expected that one or two Congressmen who are interest in District affairs will speak.

Harsh pills and purgatives often over-stimulate your intestines . . . and leave them weak and listless.

If your constipation is of the common type that is due to insufficient bulk, there's a better way to treat it. Kellogg's All-Bran supplies the bulk you need. Joan Crawford Is Herself Again in 'Mannequin' And Deft Spencer Tracy Is Even Better Than That Impending Picture Gets Down to Earth and Water on New York Streets and the Harbor Quays; Miss West Should Have Played "Anna Held;" Tromboning and Trumpeting; a Benefactor Missed Millions.

JOAN CRAWFORD, more or less, has reverted to form, as the saying goes, in her latest vehicle.

There are scant traces—in fact, none at all—of "The Bride Wore Red" in "Mannequin," to be seen on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning Friday. With its pseudo-Shavian philosophy and exotic setting, "The Bride Wore Red" was not so bad for the classes. "Mannequin," as revealed for the guys and gals of the press, in the private projection room at the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange yesterday afternoon, is infinitely better "fan fare"—please, Mr. Compositor, not "fanfare"—for the masses.

BELL.

In this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer transcription to celluloid of the Katharine Brush fable of life adjacent to the quays in New York, they are earthy and largely believable people that we meet—a no-good feller, who thinks he is a fight manager and all-around "big shot;" a "big shot," who has come up from Hester street to command of a harbor fleet and eventually a string of steamship lines, but who still entertains no delusions of grandeur, and a girl who is successively factory worker, chorus girl, mannequin and millionaire's wife.

The activities of these three strike pretty close to the public ken. They fight out an obdurate and frustrating destiny that eventually puts each in his proper place. Just what each place is will not be disclosed here in a cursory "preview" of a picture that will strike more closely home than anything in which Miss Crawford has appeared in recent months.

To identify the roles a little more minutely than by vague classification, it may be said that Alan Curtis, Spencer Tracy and Miss Crawford are the pivotal figures in the figment Miss Brush has compiled from a distant contemplation of Kismet at work along the waterfront.

Mr. Tracy, to all practical intents and purposes, "steals the fillum." This is not to say that Miss Crawford falls very far short—if at all—of the complete apprehension of the possibilities of her role, but only that Mr. Tracy is in a class by himself in the depiction of close-lipped young men of clipped speech and a keen sense of humor, who never makes a mistake in an assignment of this sort. There is something about his present performance that is vaguely reminiscent of the fine job he did as the taxi driver in "Big City"—except that he is considerably better here. Any time Spencer Tracy is "considerably better" he is very, very good, indeed.

Perhaps the unique point to be stressed in any preliminary estimate of "Mannequin" is that it introduces a new juvenile leading man under the most unpleasant circumstances possible, for him. Alan Curtis is a handsome young fellow with obvious talents and shoulders as broad as the base of the Washington Monument, who makes his debut as a screen lead in one of the most unsympathetic roles ever contrived to start a lad off on the wrong foot. The constant inclination is to take the stalwart Mr. Curtis by the scruff of the neck and muss him up a bit. One always hopes that Mr. Tracy will do it, but he never does, despite his numerous provocations. And out of all this, Curtis emerges as quite a chap. He is a prospect for future favor that it might be well to watch.

Miss Crawford makes a chorus girl and a mannequin that it might be well to watch, too. But, of course, you knew that without being told.

* * * *

So I went to see "Every Day's a Holiday." After viewing the bizarre events thought up out of her own platinum head by the curvaceous Miss West as a suitable medium of exploitation for her undulating talents, one unshakable conviction remains. That is that Miss West should have had the role of Anna Held in "The Great Ziegfeld," instead of Luise Rainer. Miss Rainer was widely acclaimed for the fine emotional fervor of her performance in the Held role, but, as a matter of fact, was no more like the smouldering French chanteuse than yesterday was like a day in June. Miss West, on the other hand, in the role of Mlle. Fifi—which she assumes midway of her gaudy charade—is the nearest approach to Anna Held that has happened along in the theater since the real Miss Held made her exit. It has always been my contention that "The Great Ziegfeld" should have been named "The Great Showman" and a little more impersonalized, thus relieving it of the precarious task of attempting to revitalize figures still fresh in the memory of this generation of theatergoers. William Powell and Myrna Loy were no more like Ziegfeld and Billie Burke than Miss Rainer was like Anna Held. Miss West is so much like Anna Held that it is just a little bit startling to some of us able to remember back beyond Henry Fonda and Simone Simon!

* * * *

Then there was the item of Charlie Winninger's trombone playing. I was anxious to see this veteran comedian, in his slip-horn sequences in "Every Day's a Holiday," just to see whether he did or didn't. He did.

And that brings up the fact that the silver-thatched Charlie really is a trombonist. The fellow knows music just as well as Louis Armstrong does, and Louis turns in some falsetto trumpeting that is not to be sneezed at—unless you have a bona fide cold—in the street parade sequences of a ribald and slightly tawdry play.

As long ago as the meeting of the executive council of the Actors' Equity Association, on December 20, Burgess Meredith was elected first vice president of Equity with the powers and duties of president, to serve until the 1938 annual meeting of the association. This places a young man and talented actor in the position occupied with such distinction for so many years by Frank Gillmore, father of the radiant Margalo Gillmore, one of the most talented of the theater's younger actresses. If memory is dull, Burgess Meredith is the same gifted player who appeared with Katharine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and John van Druten's "Flowers of the Forest," in Maxwell Anderson's "Winterset" and "High Tor" and, later, in the screen version of "Winterset," with Margo, who also appeared in the original stage production. It is a high honor that has come to the youthful Mr. Meredith and one which I suspect he will grace with a fine and sincere ability.

Speaking of John van Druten, tonight is the night the Washington Civic Theater's production of his "The Distaff Side" opens in the Wardman Park Theater, with Anne Ives in the role created by Dame Sybil Thorndyke. This promises to be one of the Civic's happiest undertakings. I'll be seeing you there—I hope.

When is a contract not a contract? Don't ask me. I'm asking you. The query is suggested by the strange experience Benny Davis has had in bringing to the fore some of the most brilliant personalities of the contemporary theater. When Benny chooses a youngster for development and exploitation behind the footlights, he places that fortunate embryonic artist under a term-contract. If they stick, they profit from the accumulated experience and genius for the theater of a master showman; if they decamp at the behest of some "chiseling" manager, Benny lets them go and they are the ones who suffer the greater loss. It has been exemplified time and time again. Benny should have made millions out of his "finds." He hasn't made millions, but he hasn't starved to death, either. The list of his proteges who have reached the top brackets would fill this column—Ruby Keeler, Vilma and Buddy Ebsen, Martha Raye, Helen Morgan, Jackie Heller, to make only a beginning—and in his present "Star Dust Revue of 1938," at the Capitol, he has a flock more. Just a big juvenile benefactor, not "on the take." Nice boy, Benny, when you know him as well as I do.

But he is a gullible lad at that. The other night we were in an eatery that advised, by printed sign, to "watch your hat and overcoat." I don't know about the hat, but Benny is wearing an overcoat hot from his tailor's workbench. He was so busy watching it that somebody walked off with his steak and potatoes!

SPENCER TRACY

one of the cinema's most naturalistic actors, who turns in another fine performance with Joan Crawford in "Mannequin," opening Friday on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. His portrayal of the role of John L. Hennessy is a skillful blending of comedy and dynamics that few screen actors could encompass.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 18.—Idol chatter: Wonder why Olivia de Havilland gets so indignant about romance rumors—one would think she had been accused of murder. That name, Homolka, always sounds to me like an outlandish cuss-word. Look alikes: Alice Faye and Irma Wilson. If I were a cosmetic manufacturer, I would give my all for an indorsement from Virginia Field. Agnes Ayres is no longer a star, but she would still be a dangerous contender in any beauty contest.

ALICE FAYE

Wish some physiognomist would explain why Warren William, who looks enough like John (Sensational) Barrymore to be his twin, leads such a staid existence. Jeanette MacDonald is a mile-a-minute driver—and the most cautious pedestrian I have ever seen. Today's brain food: Annabella tells me that she is 1 meter 63 centimeters tall—and I hope you can translate that into inches quicker than I did. Publicity aside, John Boles really owns one of the world's finest private collections of poetry. Silly attitudes: Charles Chaplain's refusal to admit that he and Paulette Goddard are married.

* * * *

Few screen stars have ever lost prestige more rapidly than Rochelle Hudson did in 1937. Confidentially, Greta Garbo is a chronic sufferer from cold feet.

* * * *

As a general rule I have a phobia about screen mammas—and no wonder, for I have seen many of them sacrifice the happiness of their precious offspring to their own greed for money. But Jane Withers's mother is not only an exception to the rule, but one of my favorite people—and here is an anecdote that shows why. Jane, as you have probably heard, is going on a personal appearance tour soon after the first of the year. Last month Mrs. Withers received a telegram from a San Francisco theater owner offering $10,000 if Jane would appear there during Christmas week. And here is the answer wired back by my favorite screen mother: "Not for $100,000. A child Jane's age should spend Christmas in her own home!"

* * * *

Amazing how the disposition of the star determines the disposition of everyone else on a set. When she goes temperamental, even the lowliest grip turns snappish; when she is cheerful, everyone wears a picnic smile and tackles the most difficult work as though it were play. Without exception the set-workers I have talked with yearns to be assigned to Ginger Rogers, Barbara Stanwyck and Ann Sothern pictures. Carole Lombard is also a prime favorite. And a sad comment on the attitude of several celebrities, notably Grace Moore and Miriam Hopkins, is the doomed air of resignation with which crew members receive orders to work on their pictures.

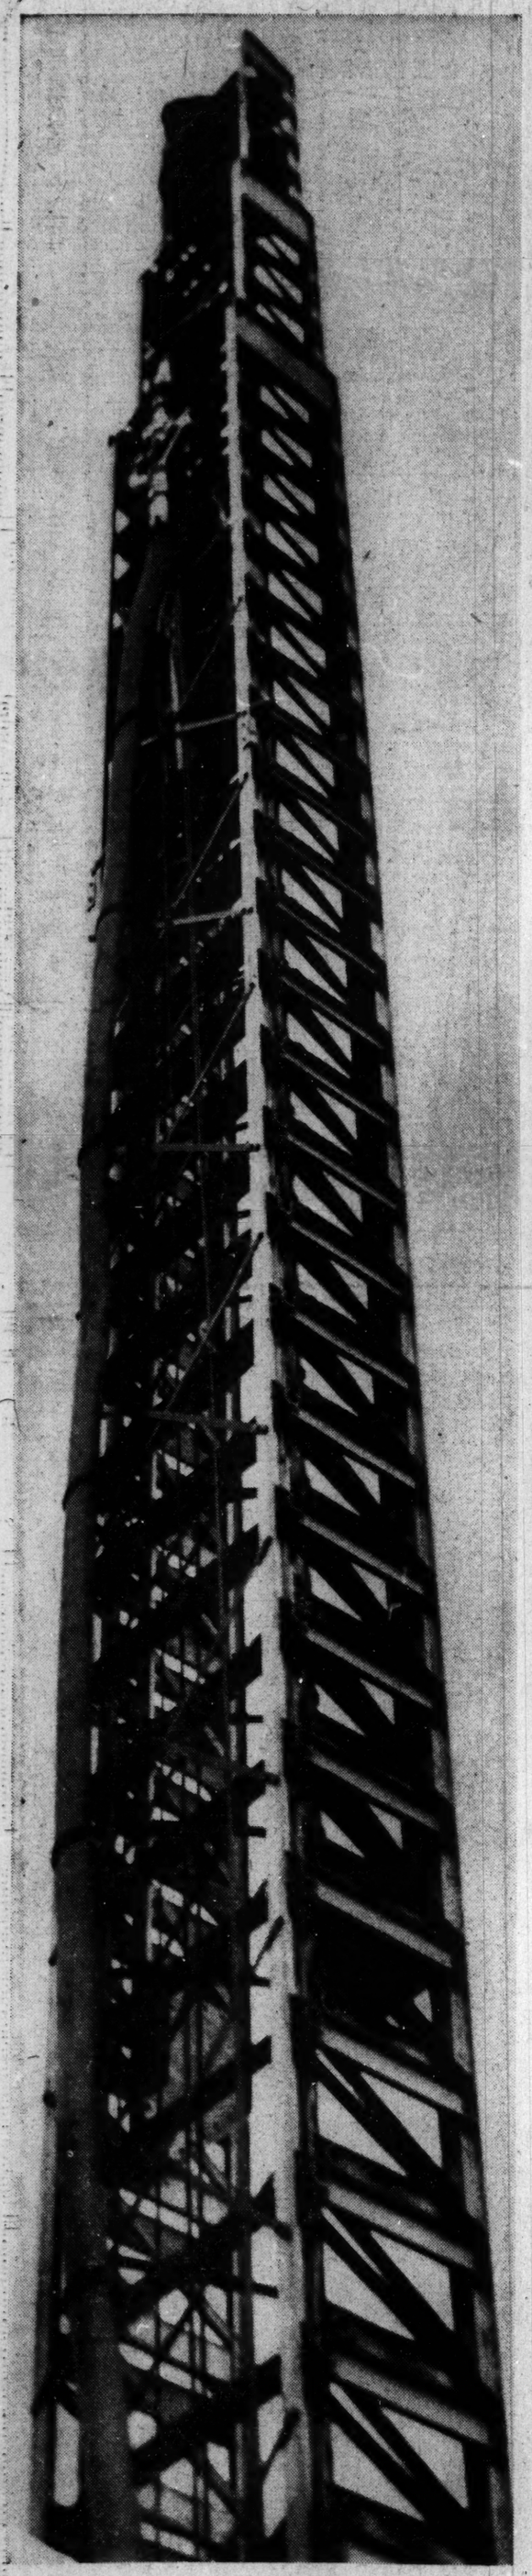
D. C. to Battle Skyscraper Fires From 100-Foot Steel Towers

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.



1 Future skyscraper fires in the Capital will be fought from 100-foot telescopic steel towers like the one above, standard equipment on three hook and ladder trucks which cost $17,350 each. The towers also serve as water towers, and are twice as strong as wooden ladders, but less than 100 pounds heavier.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Happily Married at 20, Girl Casts Her Vote in Favor of "Intelligent, Liberal, Far-Sighted Parents."

Is the youth of today amoral, pagan, hell-bent for destruction in its misuse of whatever social freedom it can wangle from parents and guardians? Is strict supervision and parental restraint the only alternative to "the tragic loss of those things which make life worthwhile—ideals of decency, self-control and personal integrity," as the mother of an 18-year-old daughter propounded in writing this column January 10? Having been called sharply to account by a man reader (a father) for maintaining that youth will not abuse freedom if properly trained in its use from the cradle upward, this columnist, on January 14, asked youth itself to speak out, "for or against 'the social freedom that prevails today.'" The resultant response has been overwhelming, with age continuing vigorously to defend the mother's and father's viewpoints. Today's column indicates what is being said. M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: (And dear M. D.): May I have the floor for a moment? How can parents be so stupid? Do they think their daughter is a sexual monster? Flattering themselves that they have a modicum of wisdom, good sense and good taste, what do they think they have produced and reared? Isn't it just possible their daughter may have inherited a certain amount of their conservatism? We "younger generation" are human beings, after all. We are trying, just like most people do, to make the best of ourselves and our lives.

I speak with experience for the side of youth, and for really intelligent, liberal and far-sighted parents. Ever since I can remember, my parents have always trusted my judgment, assuming that, since I was their offspring, I was as sane a person as they. When I was tiny, living in a suburb, they let me cross our quiet street. Other children in the block, with mothers more timorous, could not make this great venture without a grown-up's guiding hand. When I started to school, at the age of 5, I came and went alone, via the school bus. I chose my own clothes and my friends. And my parents talked to me, not in baby talk, but as if I had a mind as good as theirs. (Which I had, and have now.)

* * * *

When I was 14, and a sophomore in high school, I was sufficiently grown to want to go out with boys. Again, my parents trusted my good taste and sense. They never set a time limit for me to come home. They never questioned my choice of dates and companion, although at times I'm sure they must have been sorely tempted to.

* * * *

But I was proud of this trust, this implicit faith in me, and I conducted myself so that my parents would be proud of me in turn, and glad they had trusted me. I never went in for "illicit love making" or "petting" or any of the "forbidden pleasures" which this rather low-minded parent suspects of his own daughter. Good heavens! I was grown up! I knew the facts of life! I wanted lots of fun and healthy companionship, and perhaps a bit of hand-holding and an enamoured young calf telling me that I was the sweetest girl in the world—under a particularly full moon. But it never occurred to me or to the boy to go much farther! I wanted all the joyous fun of youth that I could get, because I realized that soon enough I would grow out of it and away from it.

* * * *

I graduated from high school; I took a secretarial course; I went to work when I was 18 for an exceptionally good firm. I had beaux who took me to concerts, beaux who took me skating, and I went away to a good many colleges for week-ends. And I think my parents enjoyed my unlimited activities and good times almost as much as I did. And they knew from experience that I had been trained to, and was able, to take care of myself under any circumstances.

* * * *

And now, at 20, I am married to the finest young man that any girl could hope to have for a husband. My parents rejoice in our marriage, and love him almost as much as I do. And here is the point—they know, as I do, that I could never have made such a perfect and happy choice had I not had to choose for myself all my life.

* * * *

Girls who are brought up sheltered, ignorant, never free to use their own judgment, never free to choose their companions, never free to rub shoulders with all kinds of people, to have pleasant and unpleasant experiences of their own bringing-about, never free to make mistakes themselves and learn thereby (and I mean innocent mistakes), will never have any true discernment of values in life and persons.

* * * *

Girls and boys should be brought up from infancy, as Miss Haworth said, with the highest ideals instilled in them and exemplified by their parents. If they have anything in them at all, they will strive to be worthy of such parents. If they have a home that is full of laughter, good books, good music and fine people, where they are given the utmost freedom to come and go, where their parents treat them as intelligent equals, and where there is not the slightest shadow of suspicion, these children will grow up as straight and true and beautiful as a pine tree in the sun.

* * * *

"Illicit thrills," "promiscuous petting" and "irreparable downfall" will never occur to such young persons. The very words are an affront to their ideals and their good taste. Apparently M. D., not trusting his daughter to go on an "unchaperoned automobile ride," must also suspect that every young man in the world is a monster ready to fall with avidity upon his helpless young daughter. This is not true—or else she's going around with underworld characters. A girl leads with her chin into any such situation. Except in cases of rape, she always sets the tone of a relationship, and the boy follows accordingly. Should he make a gesture or two toward love-making, it is generally purely tentative, and there never was a girl who couldn't get herself out of such a situation without experiencing the dreaded "downfall."

* * * *

I haven't said half what I wanted to say. But M. D.'s letter so enraged me that I sat down to the typewriter and banged out all that was seething in my head. But I do hope that I have given you an idea of how an average girl who has been given unlimited freedom feels about all this. And I am an average girl. Most of my friends have had the same sort of bringing up—where everything they did was up to them. Thank heaven, I have never known parents like M. D.—except at a safe distance. But now I must get back to my housework.

I can't neglect it any longer while I let off steam. I've told my story, anyway! Sincerely A. H.

She "Backs Up M. D."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Just one opinion to back up the letter from M. D. He gives you evidence—"unwed mothers," as the penalty of too much freedom in adolescence; something which we all know about who know or care anything about what goes on. You ignore that . . . You beg the question by saying you "differ principally on another point—namely, your conviction that the average boy and girl is essentially decent in impulse, and his conviction that the majority are just the reverse." That is nowhere near the point. He does not condemn them for their impulses. Nature is to blame for that. And the word "decency" need not be applied to nature's impulses.

* * * *

He knows that those impulses are natural and that young people should not be thrown together too much until they realize what impulses are for. He offers no condemnation which you subtly impute to him. He didn't have to look into a book of psychological theory to get advice handing out freedom to adolescents. He had his answer from truth and facts. You calmly ignore that.

* * * *

Every one of us can cite the same happenings. And our homes are the best in Washington, our interest in our children, our sacrifices, our broad-minded compromises, all that we give to our children in preparing them for life, is of the highest type. It doesn't matter how much we "instill into their minds an esthetic appreciation of all that is fine in human beings and human relationships." I know parents who have drummed that into the finest brains from infancy; into girls that are good and sweet, fine and aspiring. And I know that it is not a question of the good intentions of a girl. As M. D. says, they are not old enough to realize what these things mean—the danger of the future, the harm to their lives and souls. They are not developed enough to know.

* * * *

The answer, then, is to keep them from hazards until they do know, with a mature mind, that if you are to avoid getting burned, you must first avoid fire. In calling upon youth to speak out on this subject, you are being unfair. Of course, they will defend their own cause. And for you to answer an honest opinion with the insinuation that the giver of that opinion may have or would have misused social freedom in his younger days, is needlessly to insult one whose past was not in question. That is mighty unsporting. WOMAN READER.

Boleros Steal Midseason Spotlight

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

BOLEROS are back! Schiaparelli, the famous headline designer, started the vogue and it promises to be a fashion forerunner on through spring and summer. Bolero dresses are appearing as a midseason tonic for the jaded wardrobe; separate boleros are being exploited by all of the Washington stores and shops, as a means of adding chic to winter daytime or evening costumes.

Braid-trimmed and embroidered boleros; those with lingerie touches; boleros made entirely of lace; velvet boleros, cotton, printed silk crepe, quilted materials, in gay boleros, intricate net boleros, are all to the fore on the midseason fashion scene. Bolero suits are also news; these have 19 and 20-inch box jackets of bolero influence. For added atmosphere, add a bull-fighter's sash in sultry red, gold or royal blue, to your black or navy bolero frock, or a blouse or gilet of brilliant gypsy stripes.

The bolero pictured above is made of velvet, richly embroidered in soutache braid and worn over an all-black frock. Streamlined gold-plated jewelry enhances the ensemble; also the chic pokebonnet hat designed by Florence Reichman. An ideal costume for afternoons, informal evenings, or the popular "don't dress for dinner" realm. The same bolero could smartly top a formal evening or dinner dress with a maximum of fashion assurance.

Inches for Women, Colors for Males, Seen in New Shoes

Chicago (AP).—Women can add three inches to their height—and men can wear blue and strawberry pink shoes, if they like.

These were the most revolutionary styles among 200,000 pairs of shoes displayed at the National Shoe Fair, sponsored by the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers Association and the National Shoe Retailers Association.

Clogs with soles from two to three inches thick were described by manufacturers and stylists as the A-1 beach fashion. The stilted style has also been adapted to evening wear. Thus the small woman who has longed to be taller can literally grow up.

In general, shoe fashions for women were more conservative in design and color than they have been in several seasons, but shoes for men have developed a flamboyant trend.

Blue is a leading color for feminine footwear, followed by a reddish copper, black and wines, ranging from deep purple to a new shade dubbed strawberry pink. And these colors are duplicated in men's shoes—yes, even to the blush of the strawberry.

Solid white is not as prominent as in the past few years, but white in combination with blue, copper, black and the wines are numerous for both men and women.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

A Bathtub Danger.

Yesterday, in discussing the accidents that occur in the home, especially in the winter, as was pointed out by the Red Cross, we noted one of their "Don'ts" which was, "Do not turn on the electric light while standing in the bathtub."

This brings up the question of low voltage shocks. It is not generally realized that the low voltage of the ordinary electric fixture in the home is sufficient, under proper circumstances, to electrocute and kill. Our ordinary domestic electric voltage is 110 volts.

Most electric fixtures leak, and when the body is moist, especially if wet feet are on the ground, a circuit is formed which has frequently caused death. It is not the voltage, but the amperage which is dangerous. In fact, very high voltage is less likely to be dangerous than low voltage and high amperage shocks.

The heart produces a feeble electric current every time it beats and it takes very little current to stimulate the heart muscle into a condition of fibrillation which is almost inevitably followed by death. No very large alternating voltage would have to be applied to well-moistened extremities to cause this form of heart stoppage. Standing in a bathtub with bare feet in water, turning on an electric light or any electric fixture, is extremely hazardous, as has been proved over and over again.

The human epidermis, when dry, has great electrical resistance, and under these conditions contact with low-voltage lines would not ordinarily cause currents of large enough magnitude to pass through the body and bring about fibrillation of the heart muscle. But it must be remembered that dryness of the epidermis is a comparative term, and what might seem a safely dry skin may transmit a fairly large current when the area of contact is large. When the skin is definitely wet with perspiration or following a bath with soap and water, all doubt vanishes.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care The Washington Post. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Sirens on Stilts.

Critics of today's highest heels might be somewhat more tolerant if they knew how far heels have come down since the stilt-like pedestals that many shoes were attached to 200 years ago. Madame Pompadour and other fashionable ladies who affected this type of footwear were always attended by gallants or servants to keep from toppling over when they walked.

Newest Sweater Fits Snugly Over Top of the Skirt

Paris (U.P.).—Sweaters no longer are just sweaters—they vary with individual tastes. The newest type Mainbocher's draped sweaters, which are worn out over the skirt top, fits snugly about the hips.

There are the conventional high-necked long-sleeved sweaters and those with short, loose sleeves above the elbow. Necklines are high, square, round or V-shaped. Lelong shows a group with high V's set in crossover yokes.

At Vera Borea knitted blouses of the jacket type are snug-fitting and buttoned to high, tailored collars. Pockets are placed high at either side of the vest-like front and as a novelty she tucks a pair of miniature rabbit heads in gold at the edge of one pocket so that they seem to be peeping over the top. Deep green, rust, rich blue and Bordeaux are the shades chosen for the knitted blouses. They are shown with contrasting wool skirts.

Designs of a contrasting shade of yarn are worked onto deep-hued sweaters fashioned with short sleeves and high, square necklines. Classic pullovers are soft and rich in deep-hued yarns.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Jan. 18.

I DECIDED it was time to take the pulse of our night life again just for the benefit of those who feel that New York is the two square miles loosely called "Times Square." And it is the duty of Dr. Hughes to report that the night-life ticker is jumpy and shreddy and misses a beat now and then.

ALICE HUGHES.

The 20 theaters open are doing just mildly well and could use a small mess of new hits with no trouble at all. True, there are a few, such as the George Cohan and Ed Wynn girly shows and a half-dozen comedies and dramas. But they don't add up to a whopping theater season here by any manner of means, and with the approach of Lent I fear Broadway will just have to write 1937-38 off as another of those stage years, hardly here, barely there. And, as usual, we started in September with the conventional high hopes! Ah, well.

The night club men have even longer faces, some of them resembling War Admiral when melancholy. The huge new International Casino knocked the far-famed French Casino into complete darkness, and it remains to be seen whether wonder-child Billy Rose can make the latter flourish again.

The closing that staggered Broadway's faint heart was that of the "Hollywood Restaurant," which for nine years was one of the street's most famous and popular night clubs, with big choruses of unclad beauties and famous stage and radio stars as bill-toppers. "The Hollywood" said "Uncle" and quit after suffering staggering losses. So you see that all is far from well along what local yokels sometimes dare to call "the main stem."

Shh, but what do we care? The town is huge and wide and wonderful and even I still know a hundred places even more fun, and with better grub! Shows and night clubs die, but fun in New York always marches on, thank heaven!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Once a year our town's movie critics turn the tables by actually buying cocktails for someone else! That's the day the lads and lasses announce their choices of the year's best films, acting, directing, and so on . . . It was a nice party, a few Sundays ago, at the Rainbow Room, with "Emile Zola" being named their pet picture of '37 and with Paul Muni and Greta Garbo getting their acting votes. They had in some nice guests, too—among them being Mary Pickford, Jawn Barrymore, Paul Lukas, Henry Fonda, Ethel Merman, and so on. And the critics paid! . . . But they got a rate!

* * * *

Oh, people here do have such fun! Many times a day they pull fire-alarms just to see the big red wagons roll, but the meanest fun-haver and jokesmith was the man who reported to police that a man had been shot in a bank robbery at Forty-first and Seventh avenue, the heart of town! It was horrible—radio cars howling up from all directions, cops tearing in to the bank with drawn guns, and scaring us poor citizens half to pieces. For such a despicable wag as this I suggest a good slow simmer in oil over a hot blaze.

* * * *

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, that fine old pioneer feminist who lives in one of our suburbs, had a fine seventy-ninth birthday party the other day. Right now her chief interest is peace, as whose isn't? But we don't know where to look! Her long-life idea is to keep busy, and she says that right now she is doing embroidery and pottery. Pottery at 79—well, it's an idea . . . Local stores are making vigorous drives to put color into clothes—and the rest of life, too. One big one on Fifth avenue has been running a voting contest to choose favorite shades from a chart, and they've run in this order: Dusty blue, rose red, dusty pink and blue violet. Wonder why all the emphasis on dust?

* * * *

Having looked into the furniture situation closely, I find it cheerful, if not very original, this winter. The strides in low-priced and well-designed modern house furnishings is what pleases me most. Remember when we used to laugh at "modern?" Those days are forever gone and the newer types of house things have won their way into our hearts—and living rooms.

Psychologists Split on Why Women Primp

Three Reasons Include: To Please Men, Selves and Other Women.

Chicago (AP).—Women, at least some of them, primp because they feel the need of a pick-me-up after "blue spells" or spats with their boy friends.

Others put on fancy frills to punish their husbands by making them pay the bills, one of three psychologists said today.

Another view, and this from a woman, Miss Agnes Sharp, chief psychologist of the Psychiatric Institute of the Municipal Court, was that women dress just to capture the interest of the male.

The psychologists came out of separate mental huddles on the question of why women go in for self-adornment on a big scale, after Prof. Joseph T. Casey, of the philosophy department of De Paul University, had said that women primp because of other women.

To Satisfy Selves.

"Woman," said the professor, "is far more concerned about reactions from members of her own sex. It is for the more critical taste of other women that she toils at her toilette."

But Mrs. Evelyn Millis Duvall, psychologist and executive director of the Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education, asserted women wear skyscraper hats, draw vivid red lines across their lips and keep up on the latest in hair styles because "way down deep every woman dresses to satisfy herself."

"Clothes," she said, "may make the man, but to a woman they fill in the difference between what she wants and what she is getting out of life.

"If you doubt it, notice how frequently the new hat or facial follows on the heels of a 'blue spell' or a break with the boy friend."

"Narcissistic" Complex.

"I would be inclined to agree with Prof. Casey," said Robert N. McMurry, executive secretary of the Chicago branch of the Psychological Corporation.

"This is not true in every case, but a great many women may be said literally to be in love with themselves.

"Some women also dress up as a means of attack upon their husbands by spending their money for clothes."

Miss Sharp, however, held that, fundamentally, women dress for men.

"Clothes," she said, "besides being utilitarian, carry a narcissistic and mildly exhibitionistic connotation, and are worn to attract members of the opposite sex."

By Alice Brooks.

YOU'LL take greater pride in your linens when they carry your own initials . . . especially these smart new ones that combine embroidery with crochet. There are enough cutwork motifs to make two pairs of towels or pillow cases or two scarfs. You can make the initials larger or smaller depending upon the size of the thread and hook you use. In pattern 5749 you will find directions and charts for a complete alphabet; a transfer pattern of two motifs 5½ x 8¾ inches and two motifs 5¼ x 6 inches; directions for use of initials; illustrations of all stitches used.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

JUST IN case you think the 1,200-calorie reducing menus are too good to be slimming—you can lose 50 pounds in a year on these menus! The balanced reducing diet is high in vitamins for beauty, and low in calories for reducing.

Wouldn't you rather eat and lose weight than "diet" and lose your health and disposition? Eating to grow slim is the best way to deal with avoirdupois. In reducing, what you eat is more important than what you do not eat. You need certain foods to keep your schoolgirl complexion rosy, your crowning glory shining and your sweet disposition intact.

Vitamins, mineral and protein are the reducer's formula for health and beauty. Excess fat represents stored calories and nothing else—for an effective reserve of the protective food elements cannot be stored. That is why it is so important that these elements be furnished daily in the diet. Not only must they be included, but the amounts must be the same as if you were not reducing.

The backbone of a safe reducing diet is made up of lean meat, eggs, skimmed milk or buttermilk, fresh fruits and vegetables, a small amount of whole grain bread and butter. On such a diet you will feel better while you are reducing than when you are overeating. You only lower your vitality onmenus that are nutritionally inadequate.

To make good the wear and tear on body tissues, a certain amount of protein is required every day. This is furnished in meat, milk and eggs. The reducer's diet should always include a liberal serving of lean meat daily. If you wish, you may have lean meat twice a day to advantage, since it helps you to feel well fed and you can reduce faster when a larger percentage of your calories are in the form of protein. Every reducing diet should include at least one egg daily and at least one glass of skimmed milk or buttermilk—two glasses are better—to supply not only protein but the important minerals—calcium, phosphorus and iron. It's iron that keeps the roses in your cheeks and calcium and phosphorus that make beautiful teeth and strong bones.

Vegetables and fruits are included to supply vitamins, minerals and bulk. Whole grain bread is used as a source of vitamin B for nerves and muscle tone, and butter furnishes vitamin A to build up your resistance to colds.

1,600 Senators and Representatives and Their Families Crowd Into White House for Their Annual Reception

The President and Mrs. Roosevelt Are Attended by Dwindling 'Official Family' at Brilliant Affair.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Political differences apparently were forgotten and legislative bickering omitted for several hours last night while Democrats and Republicans, conservatives and liberals—some 1,600 strong—donned white ties and top hats . . . trailing evening gowns and long white gloves . . . and flocked to the White House to pay their respects to the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

The occasion was the Congressional reception attended annually by Senators and Representatives; their wives and sons and daughters; their in-laws; their out-of-town guests and a goodly number of extras in none of these classifications.

"Well, it's an all-American get-together, anyway," observed an astute statesman who stood in the Red Room, surveying the seemingly endless procession passing on to the State Dining Room. And certainly it was all-American in every sense of the term—with every State in the Union, every section of the country well represented in the throng that was fully an hour and a half getting from the East Room, through the Blue Room, where host and hostess greeted them, to the State Dining Room.

There was no deviation from the procedure observed at other receptions. The scarlet-coated Marine Band in the lobby at the opening hour struck up a lively tune as President and Mrs. Roosevelt, followed by other members of the "official family," walked from the State Dining Room to the Red Room. From there, host and hostess went on to the Blue Room, while Cabinet members and their wives remained in the Red Room.

Five Cabinet Members Attend

There were five Cabinet members in the procession. At each reception the "official family" has dwindlew by one or two and last night's event drew the smallest number thus far this season. The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull were there, she in a stunning frock of green and gold lame, made on simple lines with a slight train. The Secretary of War, Harry H. Woodring, walked in with the Secretary of Labor, Miss Frances Perkins, who wore a frock of red satin and a short gold-cloth coat. Others there were the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, who wore gold lame, and the Secretary of Commrece and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, the latter in blue and silver lame with silver accessories.

While a number of outstanding Senators and Representatives were conspicuously absent, many equally noted ones were in the company. Other guests included the party of 15 who dined with the President and Mrs. Roosevelt preceding the reception. In this group were Norman Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. John Baer, Mrs. Sybil Burne, Charles Engelhard, Capt. and Mrs. Boerge Rohde (she was the former Ruth Bryan Owen), Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. L. Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Willert, Miss Marguerite LeHand, and Capt. Howard Turner.

Bankheads Are Popular Guests

The Vice President and Mrs. John Nance Garner were not on hand for the reception, but the Speaker of the House and Mrs. William B. Bankhead were there, completely surrounded by friends and admirers. Mrs. Bankhead was gowned in white silver lame, fashioned on princess lines with a V-neck and a brief train. Arriving with the Speaker and his wife were the former's brother and sister-in-law, Senator and Mrs. John Bankhead, the latter wearing a frock of black velvet with a black sequin bodice and a short train.

Senator and Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark attended, she in a gown of emerald green satin made with a halter neck and trimmed with green and crystal stones at the waist and shoulders; also, Senator and Mrs. William H. King, the latter in white lace; Senator and Mrs. Warren Austin, she in a gown of orchid crepe trimmed with brilliants and made with a fitted bodice and a small train; Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper, the latter in a stunning frock of pale yellow silk, fashioned with ruffles around the full skirt.

Senator Hattie W. Caraway, who rarely puts in an appearance at social functions, was among the guests. She wore a frock of black lace. Mrs. Morris Sheppard was among the early arrivals. One of the loveliest of the "Senate wives," Mrs. Sheppard was especially attractive last evening in her gown of white and silver brocade.

Senator Bailey Attends Party

Senator Josiah W. Bailey was there, accompanied by his son and daughter, James P. Bailey and Miss Elizabeth Bailey. Senator and Mrs. Edward R. Burke held a little court of their own in the State Dining Room, with several members of the Nebraska delegation gathered around. Mrs. Burke was gowned in white satin trimmed with rhinestone clips.

Senator and Mrs. Pat McCarran—she in black satin with crystal accents—were glimpsed in the throng; also, Senator and Mrs. Royal S. Copeland, the latter in black satin fashioned with a train; Senator and Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, she in white brocade; Senator and Mrs. Henry F. Ashurst, Senator Arthur Capper, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman.

Senator and Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis were there, the latter wearing a black and gold lame gown. Others glimpsed from the upper house circle were Senator and Mrs. Carl A. Hatch, Senator and Mrs. M. M. Logan, Senator H. Styles Bridges and Senator and Mrs. Dennis Chavez.

From the House of Representatives were a number of noted guests. The House majority leader, Representative Sam Rayburn, was there; also, Representative Caroline O'Day, wearing a lovely frock of black net; Representative and Mrs. Lawrence E. Imhoff, the latter gowned in orchid and purple chiffon, and Representative and Mrs. Thomas E. Ford.

Bruce Barton Is Center of Attention

Representative Bruce Barton, of New York, made his first appearance at a White House social function, and was a center of attention throughout the evening. With him was Mrs. Barton, gowned in silver lace. Representative and Mrs Sol Bloom were there, the latter wearing a frock of "burnt toast" crepe trimmed with bands of cartridge pleats around the skirt and the bolero.

Representative and Mrs. Harry B. Coffee were glimpsed among the guests. Mrs. Coffee wore a blue frock made with a slipper-satin bodice and a billowing chiffon skirt. Among others there were Representative and Mrs. John J. Dempsey, the latter in heavy white silk brocade; Representative and Mrs. Phil Ferguson, she in white satin with a red poppy design; Representative and Mrs. Dow W. Harter, the latter in bright blue sheer crepe with silver and blue lame trimming; Representative and Mrs. John F. Dockweiler, greeting their California friends on all sides. Mrs. Dockweiler wore a black beaded frock made with a sohrt jacket.

Also Representative and Mrs. Michael K. Reilly, Representative and Mrs. Sam Massingale, who had with them their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Nelson; Representative and Mrs. Ralph K. Brewster, the latter in a gown of black net with a full skirt, a sequin-trimmed jacket and sequin slippers; Representative and Mrs. Allard Gasque, the latter in a Molyneux model of gold crepe over gold cloth. Accompanying the Gasques was their house guest, Mrs. Edwin Marshall Allen, of Florence, S. C., who wore a gown of black crepe with silver accents.

Among others there were Representative and Mrs. Maury Maverick, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph K. Chase (she was formerly Miss Jane Holt), Bishop and Mrs. James E. Freeman, the Rev. and Mrs. Ze Barney Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. William E. Galvin, of Toledo, Ohio, and Richard Adolphe Staderman, of New York and Washington.

THIS IS A calendar to end calendars on parties to come. There won't be many more social events forecast here in the next few days for the simple reason that every hostess in Washington has already been announced as either giving or going to certain luncheons, cocktails and dinners every day for the next fortnight.

A grand windup reveals the cocktail party for which Mr. and Mrs. William Phelps Eno have issued invitations. The affair will take place on Sunday and is in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Clark Minor and Mrs. Joseph P. Devereux . . . Mrs. Laurence Vincent Benet has planned a luncheon for next Tuesday and Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister, is giving a tea that same afternoon at the legation on Eighteenth street. Mrs. Benet returned to Washington to live last winter after being for many years a leader of the American colony in Paris.

Miss Joan Lueddemann, attractive young niece of Senator and Mrs. Borah, is being most royally entertained. Stellita Stapleton is giving her a luncheon today and Emlyn Knight Davies, daughter of Mrs. Emlen Davies and Joseph Davies, recently named Ambassador to Belgium, is giving a cocktail party for Miss Lueddemann tomorrow afternoon. Miss Davies returned only a few days ago from Moscow and St. Moritz. She served as her father's secretary in the Soviet capital and studied law on the side. This clever young person has also had several of her poems published in a national magazine.

GOV. AIKEN of Vermont and Gov. Quinn of Rhode Island, who are here to attend a conference of New England Governors with the President today, were accompanied to Washington by Mrs. Aiken and Mrs. Quinn. This afternoon they will all attend a cocktail party to be given at the Mayflower Hotel under auspices of the New England Council . . . Here on council business is George Sommaripa, who with Mrs. Sommaripa lived in Washington a year or two ago. The latter, who usually divides her time between her homes in Tuxedo Park and New York City, is now living in Boston to be with her young son, who is in a hospital there. Mr. Sommaripa is at the Mayflower until returning to Boston Saturday or Sunday.

MRS. SOL BLOOM and Miss Vera Bloom entertained at another of their popular "at homes" yesterday afternoon. Among those who called were the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the First Secretary of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. Mahoney, Mrs. Matthew Hanna, very chic in a metal-cloth blouse and black skirt and a black velvet hat with a veil; Mrs. Mark Bristol in black velvet with pretty green jewelry, the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Molekamp; Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie and several others.

Everybody agreed that the Blooms serve just about the best food in Washington. Little pastries topped with strawberries and cream and tiny pattie shells filled with hot mushrooms are hard to resist.

Taylors Leave City For Visit in Mass.

Mrs. Volney Taylor, of Brownsville, Tex., accompanied by her daughter, Miss Marizell Taylor, will leave tomorrow for Cambridge, Mass., to visit Volney Taylor, jr., a law student at Harvard.

Boycott Use Is Topic at War Parley

Morley Defends Collective Action Against Aggressor Nations.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

To boycott or not to boycott was the question before yesterday afternoon's session of the Conference on the Cause and Cure of War which opened its thirteenth annual meeting in the morning at the Washington Hotel. Harry D. Gideonse, associate professor of economics at the University of Chicago, asserted the boycott was not effective as an instrument employed against the aggressor nation and reacted harmfully on the boycotter — an assertion with which Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, who followed him on the program, took issue.

The growing boycott of Japanese products was cited by Mr. Morley as an illustration of "instinctive collective action against a clearly-defined aggressor nation. "Organized peace machinery as represented by the League of Nations, having broken down, it is natural that we should find a more intensive personal interest in the continuing effort to preserve peace by making aggression unprofitable," he said. "Intelligent Japanese recognize that the boycott movement in this country is not a sign of hostility to Japan but merely a refusal to lend individual co-operation to the invasion of China ordered by their military caste. Probably there are many Japanese, devoid of means of self-expression, who in their hearts actually welcome this demonstration on behalf of a victim of aggression."

The importance of the boycott movement cannot be minimized, said Mr. Morley. "It is directed not against Japan but against the anarchic theory that the American people have no interest in the preservation of world peace. For that reason its progress will be watched attentively in other capitals than Tokyo."

Reviewing "efforts to rebuild" peace machinery during the past year, Mr. Morley placed first the "practical liberalism" of the trade agreements program, based on the assumption that a general restoration of prosperity will weaken the forces working for war. He cited the Nyon antipiracy agreement as an illustration of the effectiveness of decisive action against aggression, contrasting this with the failure of the "facade of nonintervention" in the Spanish civil war. "Formal cooperation" between all signatories wishing to uphold the Nine Power Treaty should be encouraged by every advocate of peace, he argued.

Former Envoy's Daughter Speaks

At the close of Mr. Morley's talk, Miss Hilda Yen, daughter of the former Chinese Minister to the United States, W. W. Yen, rose to ask whether he could suggest any methods to stop the aggressors in China efficiently and quickly. Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who presided at the session, invited Miss Yen to the platform to repeat her question and be presented to the women of the conference.

Mr. Morley's answer was that one way would be a boycott so successful "that American women will become as self-conscious about wearing silk stockings as they are now in wearing those of any other material."

Miss Yen is now in America working under Miss Katherine F. Lenroot at the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, to learn methods being developed in the "better care of mothers and babies" in this country.

Mr. Gideonse, taking the opposite view of the boycott, declared that such a measure carried out by individuals served only "to rub sore spots in international affairs" and asserted it would inevitably hurt the boycotters. If undertaken by a group of nations such as England, this country and The Netherlands, he said, it could be effective. "But remember," he warned, "such action might be challenged to the point of war. There should be necessary preparedness enough to see it through if possible. Don't start by shaking your fist and end by shaking you finger," he added.

Other speakers at the afternoon session were Henry A. Atkinson, author and member of the faculty of Atlantic Theological Seminary, and John Perrine Walker, of Harvard University.

James A. McDonald Reviews World Situation

James G. McDonald, of the New York Times, former president of the Foreign Policy Association, addressed the morning session, presenting a comprehensive picture of the world situation. In the United States' good neighbor policy he found everything admirable, he said, except the proposed leasing of second-hand destroyers to Brazil, a proposal which has been dropped. Rearmament is going on in the world on a fantastic scale, he added, "but I am not sure one is justified in condemning the program."

In the realm of political cooperation, although the feeling generally is that this country is isolationist and that this is reflected in the Government, the the Government has not surrendered to it, he said. "There are, however, few indications that the Government is set on a policy that would let the United States lead in effective co-operation with the rest of the world.

Miss Josephine Schain, chairman of the Commitee on the Cause and Cure of War, opened the conference in the morning, calling attention to the events of the past year, "the violation of treaties, strife between groups threatening the economic fabric of the world, civil war endangering the peace of Europe, one great nation invading another without declaration of war but not without the horrors of modern warfare," and asked "what are we going to do about it?"

"I have faith to believe this group of delegates can give definite direction to the whole course of public opinion on foreign policy in this country," she asserted, closing with a plea to members of the conference to "give all the force of your great national organization to the search for a vital present day program for peace."

Judge Manley O. Hudson, of the Permanent Court of International Justice, who spoke last night, confined himself to a explanation of the functions of the world court. He was introduced by Mrs. Frederic M. Paist, president of the National Council of Jewish Women.

The conference sessions are being held in the Hall of Nations of the Washington Hotel, at the back of which are large charts and posters, displaying the work of the various organizations in the field of peace education and, as a symbol of promise for the success of their endeavor, a rainbow booth in the center.

A reception followed last night's session. There also was a luncheon at noon of the Marathon Round Table chairmen and today Mrs. Roosevelt will receive delegates at the White House.

Shoppers Plan Fashion Show

'Life Without Silk' Theme of Women's League Planned Exhibit.

A fashion show on the theme "Life Without Silk" will be given at the home of Mrs. Gifford Pinchot by the League of Women Shoppers January 28. Miss Alice Barrows announced the affair yesterday at the business meeting held at the home of Mrs. Dean Acheson. The league also plans a dance February 4 on the Washington Hotel roof, it was announced by Mrs. Robert Wyman Horton.

Receiving with Mrs. Acheson yesterday were other league sponsors, Mrs. Lester Buchanan, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Judge Marion Harron, of the Board of Tax Appeals, and Miss Faith Williams.

An informal tea preceded the business meeting. Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Coleman, daughter of Senator Burton K. Wheeler, and president of the league, presided. Committee chairmen reported, Mrs. Sidney Speare on the work of the league before the minimum wage board for restaurant and hotel employes, and Mrs. Edward Hollander, of the investigating committee, on her committee's activities with the retail clerks' union.

The table at which tea was served had a centerpiece of white roses and was lighted with white candles. Mrs. Shouse, Mrs. Buchanan and Judge Harron poured. Mrs. Shouse wore a costume of black, Mrs. Buchanan was in gray and Judge Harron wore a plum-colored frock with a hat to match.

The league was organized last spring by a group of women whose interest was aroused by formation of the organization in New York and its work in using consumer power to effect social justice. It was formed on the theory that 90 per cent of all goods sold in this country are purchased by women.

Other officers in addition to Mrs. Coleman are Mrs. Marquis Childs, vice president; Mrs. Bernard Gould, treasurer; Mrs. Charles W. Collier, executive secretary; Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, chairman of the investigating committee; Mrs. William Zimmermann, jr., chairman of the legislative committee; Mrs. Mildred Burke and Miss Frances Rice, co-chairmen of the committee on labor standards; Mrs. Leon Henderson, chairman of the education committee; Mrs. Bennet Schauffler, chairman of the membership committee; Miss Mary Taylor, Mrs. Edward Hollander and Miss Lola Wyman, members at large.

ALL IS NOT OVER at the headquarters of the General Federation of Women's Clubs despite the fact that the scene of women's activities has shifted this week to the Washington Hotel and the Cause and Cure of War Conference. Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation, has called an informal conference luncheon for Friday at headquarters for a discussion of the spending drive indorsed by the executive board at its meeting last week. Heads of the 11 women's organizations participating in the conference will be present.

Miss Alves Long, chairman of the department of international relations, also will entertain at tea at headquarters tomorrow afternoon, honoring the federation's delegates here for the conference.

Mrs. Lawson will speak on "Annual Exhibition of American Art as a National Impetus" at the luncheon of the Municipal Arts Committee of New York City, to be held at the Waldorf Astoria this noon. Mrs. Henry Breckenridge, chairman of the committee, will preside, and Mayor LaGuardia will take part in the program.

SHH—DON'T TELL anybody, but there's to be the Big Apple at the Navy Relief Ball. There's even talk of having some professional dancers on hand to give a demonstration of just how it should be done, and adding pep to the dance when the guests join in. The big sail loft at the Navy Yard is to be the scene of the ball this year and it is being given on March 1.

THE SHAKESPEARE SOCIETY which saw a condensed version of "Love's Labor's Lost" at its meeting last week, will have "The Merchant of Venice" at its February meeting, with Miss Yerby Pannill in the role of Portia, and J. Edmund Vietch as Shylock. Edwin E. Willoughby, bibliographer for the Folger Library, is also on the program for a talk on "The Everyday Reader of Shakespeare."

The society meets every month at the Universalist Church, on Sixteenth street, with from 150 to 200 members and guests attending. E. V. Wilcox has been head of the group since 1920 and spends each summer working out its programs so as to have them ready when the season opens in October.

EARLENE WHITE, president of the National Business and Professional Women's Clubs, is noted for knowing practically all the club members throughout the country by their first names. The modern hats, however, have her baffled—they are doing something to her gift for remembering people. She meets a new member at a banquet in the evening, sees her the next day with a millinery creation perched on top of her head and so far as Earlene is concerned it's just not the same person at all, and that's that.

The National B. and P. W. president, by the way, is deserting the Cause and Cure conference, which she has been attending faithfully, to speak tonight before a meeting of the Sons of the American Revolution on "The Constitution."

I SAW a snowflake or two yesterday and I've been watching the sky with concern ever since. There are those who say a Cause and Cure of War conference alwas brings a blizzard to Washington—recalling that in 1936. How much farther back they go to verity their assertion I don't know, but nobody can deny it snowed with a vengeance that year.

Thanks Sent Mexico for Suffrage Bill

Resolution Is Passed at the Inter-American Luncheon Here.

A resolution commending the president of Mexico and the Mexican government for the unanimous action of the senate, approving the proposed amendment granting women equal suffrage, was the outcome of a luncheon given yesterday by the Inter-American Commission of Women, honoring Mrs. Hanna Sheehy Skeffington, distinguished Irish feminist. The luncheon, which was held in the Carlton Hotel, also honored Miss Mary Winsor, of Philadelphia, and was in charge of Mrs. Abby Scott Baker, with Miss Doris Stevens, chairman of the Inter-American Commission, presiding.

The affair, which was attended by wives of many members of the Diplomatic Corps from the South American countries, was held indicative of the way in which women's interest in the cause of equal rights ignores international boundary lines. Mrs. Skeffington declared the emancipation of women is linked with the emancipation of the human race from the ills by which it is beset.

"There are black spots on the map of Europe today," she said, "but those countries have come off best in which the rights of women have been recognized. The Scandinavian countries are examples of this. Eternal vigilance, however, is the price of liberty, and if we slacken our energies, even for a moment, we are likely to lose all that the pioneers have won."

Mrs. Skeffington said that in Ireland there was "a grandfatherly attitude toward woman's rights and toward labor, a disposition to give bouquets—but there is poison in the flowers."

She spoke directly with humorous barbs hidden in serious phrases.

Miss Winsor, who followed her, talked on the subject, "Little Woman as a Phantom." Her address also was full of humor while it made the point for women's rights.

Guests at the speakers' table included: Senora Dona Rosa Huerta de Vitori Lafronto, commissioner for Ecuador on Inter-American Commission of Women, and wife of the chief of the Ecuadorean Boundary Commission; Senora Dona Fina Tudela, wife of the Chief of the Peruvian Boundary Commission; Senora Dona de Luis Formando Guachalla, wife of Minister of Bolivia; Senora Dona de Luis Quintanilla, wife of the Counselor of the Mexican Embassy; Senora Dona Flora Cavalcanti de Manuel Oliveria Lima, commissioner for Brazil on Inter-American Commission of Women; Senora Dona Petra de Munilla, wife of the Military Attache of Cuba; Senora Dona Mercedes M. de Puga, wife of the Air Attache of Chile; Senora Dona Maria Currea Aya, feminist leader, Colombia; Senorita Minerva Bernardino, feminist leader, Dominican Republic; Senorita Felecia Guerra, director, girls' school, Havana, Cuba.; Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Democratic National Committeewoman for Pennsylvania; Dr. Louise Stanley, Chief, Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture; Miss Charlotte Chatfield of Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture, and Mrs. Iris Walker, of Consumers' Council, Department of Agriculture.

Home Economics Looms as Potent Factor In U. S. Schools, D. C. Unit Told at Dinner

The home economist will be more important in the educational system in the next 10 or 15 years than she has been in the past, Mrs. Kathryn Van Aken Burns, national president of the Home Economics Association told the District of Columbia branch last night at a dinner at the Admiral Club.

"At last educators are realizing that nearly everyone is a member of a family, and learning to live successfully in the family group is the best preparation for successful living in the community," she said.

"Other fields of current interest in which the home economist is trained to be of assistance are in educating for the need of adequate housing and promoting an intelligent interest in positive health programs.

Today there is great interest in adult education and home economics has much to contribute not only to women but to men who are interested in raising the level of family living."

Erie Railroad Taken Over by Federal Court

Company Unable to Meet $10,000,000 Owed to Creditors.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Jan. 18.—A United States District Court took control of historic Erie Railroad today under section 77 of the Federal bankruptcy act.

The road, reporting it expected to be unable to meet approximately $10,000,000 in debts due between January 1 and March 1, sought the action as a way out of its dilemma.

Judge Samuel H. West signed the application four hours after it had been filed, making operations subject to court approval pending appointment of one or more trustees February 14. He ordered Erie to submit a financial statement by April 18, and to make monthly reports thereafter.

In its petition Erie said it owed $10,071,062 between January 1 and March 1 for "principal maturities, interest payments, leased line rental and equipment trust payments." Not included was $1,564,640 outstanding January 1 in "secured bank loans against which the banks holding same have since applied cash balances of debtor . . . and debtor also has a large amount of unpaid vouchers for traffic balances, materials, supplies and other expenditures."

Cash on Hand.

Erie's petition said its net cash balance at close of business January 15 was $2,116,330. Cash from all sources through March 1 was estimated at $10,102,955 to pay operating expenses and taxes estimated at $10,613,495, "so that estimated amount available for debts due and to become due during that period will approximate $1,605,790."

The road's directors, meeting in Cleveland's Terminal Tower, reached their decision in a half-hour meeting. Immediately Erie stocks and bonds plummeted on stock exchanges. Erie common dropped $1 to around $3, compared with a 1937 high of $23.62. Erie $1,000 bonds, already down $100 to $250 from 1937's close, shrank as much as $130 further to reach figures one-fourth to one-half last year's best.

Flush Excess Acid Waste and Poisons From Kidneys

Comfort Your Irritated Bladder and Stop Getting up Nights

Thousands of intelligent people have backache almost every day and don't know what causes it—others are nervous and irritable—thousands have to get up often at night—have frequent or scanty passage that sometimes smarts and burns—others have puffy eyes and shifting pains.

Perhaps the kidneys are to blame—sometimes waste, excess acid and poisons do not get thru the delicate filters of the kidney fast enough—they accumulate and may cause trouble.

Pharmacists can tell you that one grand and effective kidney diuretic and stimulant is GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—they bring results when a good kidney medicine is indicated.

But be very sure to ask for and get GOLD MEDAL—the original and genuine Haarlem Oil Capsules—right from Haarlem in Holland—for your health's sake—reject imitations.

On Capitol Hill

Senator Ellender, Huey Long's Successor, Has 'Talked' Since Friday in Lynching Filibuster.

SENATOR ELLENDER (Democrat), of Louisiana, holds the record among southern Senators who have been talking since January 6 against the anti-lynching bill.

Ellender, successor of one of the Senate's best filibusterers—the late Huey Long, officially has held the floor since 1 p. m. Friday. He hasn't talked continuously, however. Both proponents and opponents of the measure have interrupted him frequently and there have been several quorum calls.

Ellender shouted to his colleagues yesterday that he would propose in the anti-lynching bill to ban marriages between white persons and Negroes "in every State in the Union," in one of three amendments he has in mind.

Lest his first be considered 'too drastic," he has prepared, he said, another which would precent white persons and Negroes who marry in States permitting such marriages from entering States where they are prohibited. His third amendment, he said, would ban marriages between the races in the District of Columbia.

AN INTOXICATED MAN caused a flurry of excitement in the Senate galleries when he called out in a high voice while Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, was speaking. Capitol police hurried the man, and a woman who was accompanying him, from the building, releasing them outside. No charges were made. Officers said they failed to learn the man's name, but were informed that he was laid off from work by a Government agency last week.

CHAIRMAN NORRIS (Independent) Nebraska, announced a judiciary sub-committee had agreed tentatively on revision of his constitutional amendment proposal to make it provide for definite rejection of constitutional amendments by the States.

Testifying before the sub-committee, James Emery Brooks, of Glen Ridge, N. J., said the present amendment method leaves uncertain the status of any amendment, such as the long pending proposal to ban child labor. This has been voted on by many State Legislatures but three-fourths the number necessary for ratification have not accepted it.

Norris said his plan probably would carry a provision that hereafter when more than one-third of the States rejected an amendment it would be dead.

ATTORNEYS GENERAL AND assistants from Wisconsin, Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, and Minnesota asked the Rivers and Harbors Committee for 60 days to prepare their case against a bill that would permit Chicago to divert 5,000 cubic feet of water a second from Lake Michigan for sewage disposal, and 20 members of the Chicago Citizens Waterway Committee, headed by William (Big Bill) Thompson, former mayor, charged "filibustering" tactics.

David W. Miller, director of commodity distribution, Board of Public Welfare, said another car containing 26,730 pounds is expected.

C. W. Shafer Dies; Active in Public Affairs

Washington Native Served as Treasurer of Finance Firm.

Charles William Schafer, treasurer of the Oriental Building & Loan Association, died last night at his home, 1339 Kalmia street northwest. He was 46.

A native of Washington, Mr. Schafer had long been active in civic affairs, as a member of the Public Order Committe of the Board of Trade and the Shepherd Park Citizens Association.

A major share of his civic interest centered in the District Fire Department, friends said. As a boy he followed the fire engines when they left the station around the corner from his home at 445 Sixth street southwest.

In recent years he "covered" nearly every major Washington fire with a movie camera.

Known as "Buck" to his friends in the fire department, Mr. Schafer, for many years, gave an annual turkey dinner on New Year's Day for the members of No. 24 Engine House at Georgia avenue and Rock Creek Church road.

Mr. Schafer leaves his wife, Mrs. Catherine Elvin Evans Schafer, daughter of the late Inspector Charles Evans, Assistant Superintendent of Police; his parents, Charles Schafer and Emma Z. Schafer; a sister, Miss Margaret Schafer, of Washington, and two brothers, Capt. George Schafer, U. S. N., Portsmouth, N. H., and Harry Schafer, of Washington.

Needy Children Face New Loss In Lunch Fund

'Country Store' Head Cites Figures; Mrs. Boyle to Cover Expenses.

The fund for providing lunches for needy District school children, already weakened by the financial collapse of the Velvet Ball, faces another possible loss of nearly $500, it was revealed yesterday in figures made public by Moe Goodman, chairman of the proposed "country store" program, recently canceled by Mrs. John Boyle, jr.

According to Goodman, cancellation of the program, designed to raise additional funds for the lunch campaign, will necessitate either a loss of $429 by the committee, or a loss of $546 to local merchants, who already have contributed to the affair.

Stating the "loss will not be taken out of the Lunch Fund," Mrs. Boyle told The Post last night she would "personally cover all expenses incurred for the country store."

"Had the program not been canceled by Mrs. Boyle," Goodman's report stated, "the actual expense incurred by the committee to date would have been $117.79, of which $33.04 could be deducted for cash now in the treasury."

Mrs. Boyle is scheduled to appear before the Board of Education to seek a deficiency appropriation of $35,000 from Congress to aid in continuing the lunch program.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

A NIGHT AT THE WHITE HOUSE—I.

At last the long awaited invitation . . . You are met at the station in Washington by a White House car manned by chauffeur and footman, who can recognize unerringly the White House guests among 200 getting off the train—perhaps by the divine glow on their faces.

* * * *

In the long, black limousine they drive you a mile and a half through heavy traffic . . . (Cops spot the Presidential seal on the door . . .) If you ask them any questions they chat informally over their shoulders . . . You roll under the great white front portico.

* * * *

At the front door an usher is waiting to escort you up the elevator to the private quarters on the second floor, where the Roosevelts dwell . . . He guides you to your suite off the wide central corridor.

"—they unpack your bags"

Two menservants appear, to unpack your bags, and a maid to unfold your wife's dainty garments . . . She is given the enormous main room, with a bed big enough for three or four, and you are led firmly into the smaller bedroom . . . The valet whisks your suit away to be pressed.

* * * *

It is 6 o'clock, and the usher tells you that dinner will be promptly at 7 . . . You begin frantically to bathe and dress . . . The tub is one of those square things, with corners where you can sit down . . . The white towels are monogrammed "U. S." in white, and there's everything a girl would want for a week-end's toilettes.

* * * *

For several minutes every door seemed to be open, with servants moving and carrying things in every direction, but now all is quiet . . . There is a bowl of pink carnations in each room, and plenty of current books and magazines . . .

* * * *

Your windows overlook the White House gardens, the Ellipse, the Monument and the U. S. Treasury; far away through the trees gleams the Potomac. All is serene, homelike, hospitable.

* * * *

Now it is 6:30, and there is a knock at the door . . . You say "Come in," a little tentatively, and in walks Mrs. Roosevelt, not yet dressed for dinner, followed by her secretary . . . Your wife is a little flustered because there are a few curling clips in her hair. But Mrs. Roosevelt doesn't seem to notice them. Her greeting is informal and gracious.

"—the curlers are unnoticed"

"I think you could use a fire," says the First Lady . . . She walks over to the fireplace and lights the fire herself.

You know her day has been crowded with engagements . . . But she is unhurried and friendly. You chat for a moment or two.

* * * *

You admire the bed, with its pink silk and lace-covered blanket . . . "I hope you'll be comfortable," she says. "This is the bed in which Ramsay MacDonald slept when he was here." It is also occupied by some of the Roosevelt children when they visit the White House. She goes off to change dresses.

* * * *

You are shown a chart of the seating arrangement for dinner, but you will find it not much easier, as usual, to find your place than without a chart . . . Perhaps you cache a tiny cake of soap for your little daughter's collection.

* * * *

You have brought along three white vests and three white ties, just in case. You begin to hurry a little nervously . . . Your wife is certain she won't have enough time to dress and do herself justice.

* * * *

There is another knock at the door . . . The usher informs you that it is time to assemble in the upstairs sitting room a few minutes till 7. He seems just a shade surprised that you are not completely ready . . . Your wife begs prettily for just another minute, just another touch or two . . . You mustn't keep the President waiting.

Civil Service Chiefs Regret Lost Ground

Commissioners Praise Merit Principle at U.S. Workers' Meeting.

A crowd that packed the Government Auditorium last night heard speakers praise the merit system principle in government as the highlight of the local observance of the fifty-fifth anniversary of the Civil Service Commission.

The speakers were the three Civil Service Commissioners, Harry B. Mitchell, Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin and Samuel H. Ordway, jr.; Representative Robert Ramspeck, Gilbert Hyatt, of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks; Col. Charles I. Stengle, of the American Federation of Government Employes; Dr. John T. Doyle, first secretary to the Civil Service Commission, and Charles F. Sharkey, A. F. G. E. leader.

"Despite the promises in political platforms, legislation for the extension of the competitive system is still lacking," Commissioner Mitchell stated. "So far as actual accomplishments are concerned, one might say that we have lost ground during the year. Congress has again provided that newly created agencies of Government are to go about their business without the protection of the civil service law in the selection of employes."

Ordway said a commissioner should not be a lobbyist, "but I think that you employes, organized as you are, can and should stand up today, explain to the legislators who support you and fight for the essential minima of a modern personnel program. This is no time to follow hopeful visionaries who would fasten the gates wide open for a continuing parade of antiquated processes and inevitable compromises with discretion."

Ramspeck urged prompt action on the part of merit system advocates. He said the present Congress had not carried out the mandates of the Democratic platform or the Republican platform, and added that a lot of people are giving lip service to the merit principle and stabbing it otherwise in the back. He urged employes and other citizens to see their Congressmen on behalf of the merit system.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., also sent a message regretting that he could not appear.

Senator William J. Bulow (Democrat), South Dakota, urged merit system advocates to proceed slowly. "We should build on a solid foundation and not attempt to cover too much territory in a short time," he said.

D.C. Motorcyclist Faces 5 Charges In 15-Mile Chase

Police yesterday placed five traffic charges against Claude R. Bishop, 22, of 5237 Second street northwest, following his arrest after a dizzy chase through the Northwest section.

Bishop, a photographer, was seized by Motorcycle Policemen A. D. Clarke and Horace Carmichael after what they said was a 15-mile chase. The youth was riding a motorcycle also.

Clarke said he started in pursuit of Bishop on New Hampshire avenue at Park road. During the chase which sometimes reached a speed of 70 miles an hour, Bishop failed to stop at 11 signs, both officers declared.

The race ended at Third and Farragut streets northwest when Clarke rode his motorcycle into the side of Bishop's.

Charges of reckless driving, speeding, dead tags, improper muffler and no registration card will be heard in Traffic Court today against the man, Clarke asserted.

Missing Youth Sought At Central High School

Search for Charles E. Hoffman, 19-year-old George Washington chemistry student, who disappeared from his grandmother's home in Mount Rainier, Md., Saturday, leaving a note indicating contemplated suicide, turned toward Central High School after several students reported seeing a youth resembling his description at an assembly there Monday. Hoffman attended Central before entering George Washington.

Detective Sergt. John Apostilides of the public relations squad said he had talked to several of the students but none could positively identify the youth they saw as Hoffman.

Egyptologist Says Ancients Knew Syphilis

The problem of syphilis may be as old as the tombs of Egyptian kings, according to Dr. George S. Duncan, professor of Egyptology and Archeology at American University.

Dr. Duncan said last night he had found unmistakable reference to a disease which must have been syphilis in one of five Egyptian tombs at Sakkara, 16 miles south of Cairo near the Nile.

Dr. Duncan, who spoke briefly in a meeting of the Washington Anthropological Society, said the reference to syphilis was found in a prayer for the dead, carved on the walls of a tomb nearly 5,000 years ago. The disease, he said, was accurately described, and the allusion to it indicated the disease then had been known several hundred years, or as early as 3400 B. C.

He pointed out that even that early reference left unanswered the question of how it originated. Dr. Duncan said he had been working on translation of the tomb carvings the last 12 years, and planned to publish his findings in the near future.

Additional evidence against the theory that syphilis originated among the American Indians and transmitted to Europe and Asia following discovery of America, was advanced by Dr. T. Dale Stewart, assistant curator of physical anthropology at the National Museum.

Dr. Stewart said recent archeological discoveries indicated the Indians were relatively free from syphilis before the earliest explorers reached America. Among the bones of Indians known to have been buried before the white man arrived, Dr. Stewart said only occasional individuals showed indications of having had a disease like syphilis. In many of the cases there was doubt the disease actually was syphilis, he said.

Dr. Stewart said the remains of later Indians showed a high frequency of syphilis. In some burial sites, dating after the discovery of America, the number of persons having syphilis ran as high as 60 per cent, he said.

New officers of the Anthropological Society elected last night included Henry P. Collins, jr., president; Dr. George S. Duncan, vice president, and Regina Flannery, secretary.

D. C. Citizens Ask Merger of Welfare Units

Collins May Attempt to Unite All Agencies in Budget Bill.

Approval of the proposed consolidation of Washington's recreational agencies was expressed by local citizens heard yesterday by the House subcommittee on District appropriations, Chairman Collins said.

Collins has indicated he would try to effect the merger in the 1939 supply bill now under consideration.

Other civic spokesmen objected to the Budget Bureau's recommendation that old Tuberculosis Hospital at Thirteenth and Upshur streets be reopened as part of Gallinger.

Residents of the community proposed that the hospital be turned into a recreation center.

Hearings on the appropriations bill probably will be concluded today, Collins said. This morning the sub-committee will take further testimony on the Public Assistance Division, after which more citizens will be heard.

Melvin Sharpe, of the advisory board of the Keystone Automobile Club, urged the subcommittee not to divert the $765,000 street lighting costs from the general fund to the highway fund as recommended by the Budget Bureau.

"Hacking" of the highway fund "for items unrelated to motor vehicle purposes," he said, will jeopardize the purposes for which the fund was created—"relief of traffic congestion and improvement of traffic safety through major highway projects."

Driver of Automobile That Hit Tree in Coma

Clarence Wesley, 31, of 1924 Thirty-fifth place northwest, was in serious condition at Georgetown Hospital this morning after the automobile he was driving crashed into a tree at Thirty-second and R streets last night. He was still unconscious several hours after the accident.

He suffered a possible skull fracture and numerous cuts.

Modern Fire Force Sought In Anacostia

Southeast Council Asks Equipment to Fight Major Blaze.

The Southeast Council, delegate body of citizens' associations in Southeast Washington, last night took steps to protect that portion of the city lying across the Anacostia River from the disaster of a big fire.

Acting on the advice of Adelbert Lee, president of the Randle Highlands Citizens Association, the council voted to demand of District Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Fire Chief Charles Schrom installation of modern fire apparatus capable of coping with a major blaze.

Fire equipment now in service in the Anacostia area, Lee declared, was built in 1920 and in 1921 and the modern, efficient apparatus in stations on the downtown side of the river is prohibited from crossing bridges because of its excessive weight.

The council indorsed Charles F. Foster, president of the Hill Crest Citizens Association, for director of the Board of Education. Foster, a charter member of the council, is employed in the manual training department of the schools.

An echo of the quarrel that brought about a split in the Congress Heights Citizens Association, creating the Congress Heights Progressive Citizens Association, was heard by the council when representatives of the latter group applied for admission.

The council rejected the application, several of the delegates declaring that the groups should settle their differences before the progressive association can be accepted for membership. The parent association is a council member.

Liquor Sale Opposed.

Opposition to the House bill allowing purchase of liquor after midnight Saturday, was voiced by members of the Petworth Citizens' Association.

The bill, H. R. 1631, legalizing the sale of alcoholic beverages in the District until 2 a. m. Sunday morning, was termed "out of order," with members voting to make their opposition known to members of the House.

Reporting to the association on a conference held yesterday with members of the House sub-committee, Mrs. H. J. Phelps informed members that the sub-committee had been informed of the organization's opposition to the plan to use the old Tuberculosis Hospital as an annex to Gallinger Hospital. The association went on record as favoring converting the old hospital into a community recreational center for children.

Raymond E. Cable, secretary, was nominated to represent the group on the Junior Chamber of Commerce when the chamber selects "the person performing the most valuable duty to his community."

Two delegates, Mrs. Phelps and Mrs. Laverne Beales, were appointed delegates to the annual trustee election meeting of the Community Chest.

Benning Citizens

The Benning Citizens Association, in session at Odd Fellows Hall last night, authorized a letter be sent Maj. Earnest W. Brown, chief of police, and Mrs. Florence H. Rogers, supervising principal of the Sixth District, complaining about the playfulness and lack of training of the schoolboy patrolmen at the Ludlow School.

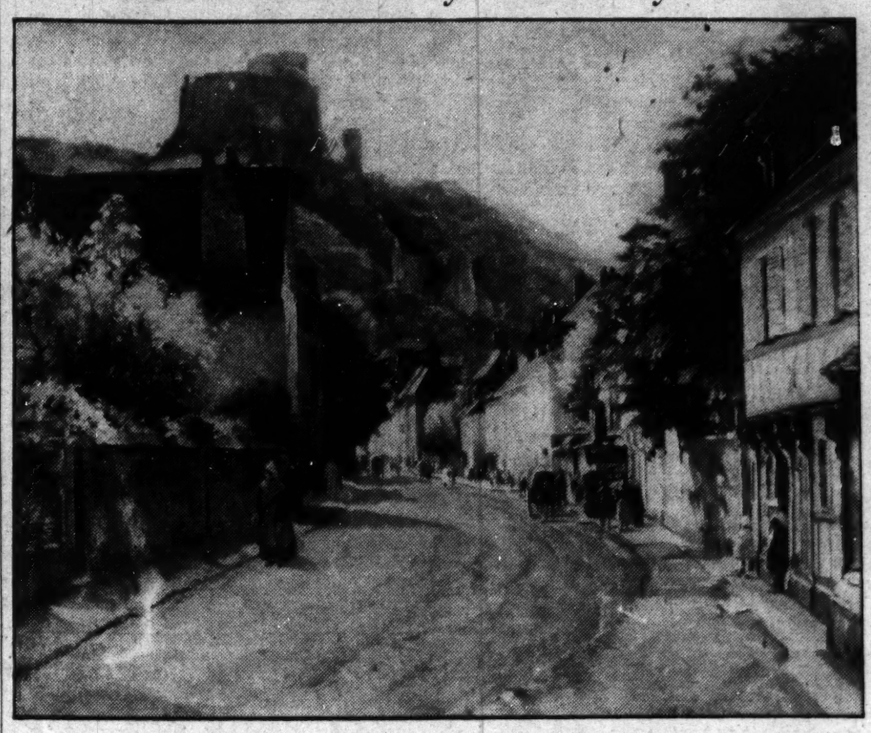
Among other things, these youngsters, drawn from the fifth and sixth grades, sometimes go on duty on roller skates, fight and play with traffic at its height, and often signal traffic to stop when there are no children to cross the streets at all, the letter asserted.

"They're worse traffic hazards than the children themselves," said one of the members last night.

The letter urged a policeman be sent to thoroughly instruct the boys, or that a new set of boys become the schoolboy patrolmen.

The association voted unanimously in favor of suffrage for the District.

'Emotional Art' Exhibited by French Army Instructor



"Bah" is Abel G. Warshawsky's answer to ultramodern art. Above is one of 30 paintings the artist, who was athletic instructor in the French army in the World War, is exhibiting here. He terms modern art "cold, factual interpretations" lacking emotion.

Md. Senators To Urge Flood Control Today

Harbor Group to Hear Tydings, Radcliffe and Two Representatives.

Senators Tydings and Radcliffe and Representative Gambrill and Lewis, all of Maryland, will be heard today by the projects committee of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in support of the proposed Potomac and Anacostia Rivers flood control projects.

The committee opened its annual two-day meeting yesterday at the Hotel Mayflower, preliminary to convening of the Rivers and Harbors Congress tomorrow.

Among those heard yesterday in favor of proposed undertakings in their respective States were Senator Pepper and Representatives Hendricks and Wilcox, of Florida; Representative Binderup, of Nebraska; Representative Hamilton, of Virginia, and Representative Keller, of Illinois.

Hamilton argued that improvement of Lynnhaven Inlet, Virginia, would provide refuge for small boats on the eastern edge of Chesapeake Bay and strengthen defenses of Fort Story on the Virginia Capes. Demands of Army engineers for local co-operation in dredging have been met and a $160,000 sewage disposal plant is being built at Virginia Beach, he asserted.

Construction of a single jetty, he said, at a cost of $213,000 will go far toward preserving the Lynnhaven oyster industry.

"Unless something is done," he said," "the oyster industry will be destroyed."

Court Reverses Liquor Sentence

A writ of habeas corpus was granted yesterday to Joseph King, serving a one-to-two-year term at Lorton Reformatory, on the ground that he was incorrectly sentenced following conviction on a charge of violating the liquor taxing law.

Appearing before Judge Luther B. Way in U. S. Court for the Eastern District of Virginia at Alexandria, King successfully argued that he should have been sentenced to "hard labor." Sentence was passed in U. S. District Court by Justice Peyton Gordon on April 23, 1937. The technical point was upheld by Judge Way.

'Bah!' Says Famed Frenchman To Modern Art; Exhibits Here

Abel G. Warshawsky Showing 30 Paintings; He Takes the Old Masters for His Examples.

A former athletic instructor in the French Army, now recognized as an outstanding landscape and portrait artist, yesterday commented on ultra-modern art as follows:

ABEL WARSHAWSKY.

"Bah!"

Abel G. Warshawsky is in Washington to exhibit 30 paintings, including some which won him a Legion of Honor ribbon from the French Government. He admires the old masters — Rembrandt and Michael Angelo—whom he refers to as "the old boys," but of these moderns:

"When one tries to reduce art to a formula, one eliminates emotion and painting is an emotional art. Real works of art are human and therefore easily understood by people. Paintings such as the production of the majority of the ultra-modern artists require several typewritten pages of descriptive material, are not art but cold, factual interpretation."

With the broad, strong hands of an All-American end, barrel-chested and stocky in figure, Warshawsky is still, physically, the young man who worked his way through school as an athletic instructor and who later helped French generals condition the poilus.

He is frankly enthusiastic about his own art.

"Sometimes," he admitted, "I get so excited when I really see and feel a subject that I can't do any work on it the first day, but after that I usually work rapidly and with a definite mind-picture of what I want to accomplish."

His collection, on display at the Raleigh Hotel, includes portraits, city views, landscapes and still life. Having spent 30 years in Paris, much of his work depicts life and scenes in France. One, "Rain and Reflection," shows two old houses beneath a bridge, on the edge of a French river which reflects them. It was awarded a prize at an exhibition in Paris of works of American artists.

An expert at portrait painting, Warshawsky sometimes completes a subject in a few hours. He rarely spends more than a week, working two hours a day, on a portrait, and when he feels he "knows the subject as an old friend," often completes the job with swift sweeping strokes.

Trained at the Cleveland School of Art and the National Academy of Design at Paris, Warshawsky has painted since his childhood. He was 16 before he saw his first original painting—before that he knew the masters only through books he read after school hours.

After concluding his exhibit here Monday, he will place his work in the Reinhardt Galleries in New York. Warshawsky plans to return to Washington to do portraits of several prominent diplomats and Government officials.

U. S. Worker Dies, Gun Found by Side

John A. Weaver, 37, an auditor in the General Accounting Office, living at the Shawmut apartments, 2200 Nineteenth street northwest, was found dead in Herring Run Park, Baltimore, yesterday afternoon, a bullet in his brain and a pistol lying between his legs.

Baltimore police said it "probably" was a case of suicide, although the coroner will not issue a death certificate until today.

Prelate Cites Communism On U.S. Ships

Bishop Curley Observes Radical Growth in Merchant Marine.

Mentioning the value of retreats such as the one conducted for Catholic laymen at Manresa-on-the-Severn, the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Catholic Archbishop of Baltimore, last night urged Catholics to "war against sin and the evil within us."

Speaking at the ninth annual banquet of the Washington section of the League for Laymen's Retreats, Archbishop Curley told a gathering or more than 600 that "we may acquire name and fame but if we fail to win the war against ourselves our life must be written down as a failure."

The archbishop asserted that conditions in our mercantile marine show how communism is spreading in the United States. The men who attend the Manresa retreats, he said, are among those not subject to subversive doctrines of any sort.

Tribute to Laymen.

Archbishop Curley, whose speech followed that of Richard Reid, head of the Catholic Laymen's League of Georgia, paid tribute to the work of Catholic laymen in that State and cited the large number of persons they had succeeded in converting to the Catholic faith.

Reid, a lawyer and one-time head of the Catholic Press Association, told briefly of the work of the laymen's league in Georgia and spoke formally on "The Interior Life of a Catholic Layman."

Reid declared that meditation is a primary requirement in the life of the Catholic layman. He also urged the value of daily, or at least weekly, reception of Holy Communion and of periodical retreats.

Reform for Reformers.

It was generally agreed, he said, that one of the outstanding needs of the Catholic Church is that of laymen to explain the church's doctrines to others. A common fallacy of reformers today, Reid asserted, is the theory that others need reform—never the reformers themselves.

The Rev. Robert S. Lloyd, S. J., director of the Manresa retreat, reviewed the work of the past year at Manresa and reported that it has been generally successful.

Leo A. Codd was toastmaster and Charles P. Maloney delivered the President's address. Entertainment was furnished by Singers George H. O'Connor, Bernard A. Fitzgerald, Fred East, William Raymond and L. A. Downey.

Among distinguished guests present at the dinner, held in honor of Archbishop Curley, were the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Baltimore; the Very Rev. James P. Sweeney, S. Show at Lotus Aimed to Dispel Business Blues

Cocktails of 1939 Boasts Many Principals in Large Cast.

By Chanticleer

There are no depression blues at the Lotus this week. Al Norton's Cocktails of 1939 in their final week have an entire line of principals that are guaranteed to dispel all business worries. The show is the talk of Fourteenth street.

Heading the bill are Corinne and Claude, the comedy Apache dancers who come to the Lotus direct from Chicago, where they were held over for 27 weeks—a record in any club. Sharing the top are The Florios, a ballroom team that will be remembered by many Washingtonians with pleasure. There also is Blanche Ray, one of the chorines who goes over with her acrobatic dance and the Three Adorables who sing and dance. And of course, there is Marion Dawn, and Al Norton the popular M. C. with Bill Strickland's Ork furnishing the music.

Baron Monjoi the 25-year-old pianist, with a Don McGrane's Orchestra at the Carlton's Shar Sad room boasts a bonafide Italian title. Popular at the club are the two-piano duets with the regular pianist, Seymour Fiddle and Baron Monjoi.

There is a certain something at the Troika that keeps luring devotees back time after time. It may be spirited gypsy dance that was arranged by the conductor, Sacha Martnovsky, or the singing violin of Durwood Bowersox, who plays request numbers, or the poised blonde cigarette girl. This week several new featurs have been introduced that bring additional gaiety.

The Bamboo Gardens feature a brilliant show which includes the Six Paramount Steppers, direct from Hollywood; Parnell and Eddie, a team of smooth adagio and ballroom dancers; Douglas and Hurlow, Martha and Frances are other attractions. Mary Martin, songstress, and Russ Cullen and his orchestra.

Tonight is circus night at the Pall Mall room. There should be plenty of fun. Portillo, the clown, has some routines guaranteed to produce a smile even on the face of the sphynx. Eddie Daniels, the genial M. C., will be ringmaster. There also will be the "Wedding of Gen. Tom Thumb," Barnum's famous midget, re-enacted by a group of Virginia Hunter's juveniles and a team of novelty and acrobatic dancers. The belle of the night is Dolores, who does a dance of cymbals—a thing of beauty like herself.

Health Session Urges U. S. Help For Child Care

Findings of Conference on Babies Submitted to President.

A new deal for the 2,000,000 babies born annually in the United States was proclaimed yesterday at the close of the Conference on Better Care for Mothers and Babies. Held at the National Museum under the auspices of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, the sessions were the first concerted effort to determine factors back of America's high death rate among mothers and their infants.

Findings of the conference, which included a request for Federal financial aid, were reported to President Roosevelt yesterday afternoon. Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, Children's Bureau chief, who called at the White House, said the President displayed great interest in the subject.

Roosevelt Interested.

"He asked many questions and showed that he is thoroughly familiar with the problem," Miss Lenroot said. He congratulated the conference particularly on the representative delegation in attendance. (Over 400 doctors and public health officials, representing 46 organizations, were present.)

The report of the findings committee, delivered at the closing session by Dr. Fred L. Adair, of the University of Chicago, called for an amendment to the social security act, increasing the Federal appropriation to States for maternal and child health services.

More Training Urged.

"Each year more than 14,000 women in the United States die from causes connected with childbirth, leaving at least 35,000 children motherless; more than 75,000 infants are stillborn, and more than 69,000 infants die during the first month of life," the report states.

The committee stressed the need for better training of physicians and nurses, better distribution of doctors in rural areas and supervision of mothers from early pregnancy through the postnatal period.

The only resolution adopted by the conference was a motion to establish a continuing committee, headed by Miss Lenroot, to carry on the movement. Each of the organizations represented at the conference was urged to appoint a member to the committee.

Mrs. Robbins Hostess.

The morning session was held in the East Room of the White House. Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins acted as hostess to the group in the absence of Mrs. Roosevelt, who was called to New York to attend the funeral of Mrs. Bernard Baruch.

A surprise speaker was James Roosevelt, who told the delegates "the best national defense this country can have is proper children growing up under proper care." Improvement in this field will make us "a Nation worthy of the respect of other nations—and one which no other nation is going to violate in any way," he declared.

Miss Josephine Roche called the death rate of babies and mothers "the best index of the progress civilization is making."

More Leaders Move to Unite Sailors' Unions

C. I. O. Chief Tells Convention Step Watched by U. S. Labor.

San Francisco, Jan. 18 (AP).—The drive to merge maritime workers into one vast group uniting 100,000 seagoing men under the banner of the C. I. O., gained momentum today as East Coast leaders joined those from the West and South and from inland ports in exhorting the seamen to united action.

Joseph Curran, East Coast chief and president of the National Maritime Union, told 350 delegates that every labor union in the Nation was watching the unity conference here, and that "as maritime labor goes, so will go every labor union in the Nation."

Only one large group of seafaring men remained away from the unity conference. This was the Sailors Union of the Pacific, which rejected two invitations to participate.

Curran was elected chairman of the unity conference today. A man serving a murder sentence for a shipboard killing, Earl King, was named honorary chairman. King is a prisoner at California's San Quentin Penitentiary.

Curran told the delegates that the National Maritime Union, organized in 1934, now had 49,500 members.

Unemployed Ratio Here Surpasses All But Rhode Island

There is a larger percentage of unemployed persons in the District than in any State but Rhode Island, John D. Biggers, administrator of the National Unemployment Census, reported yesterday.

Another 1 6-10 per cent is working at projects conducted by WPA, NYA and other agencies.

The only State to show a larger percentage of unemployed than the District was Rhode Island, which registered 6.4 per cent totally out of work and 2.2 per cent engaged on Federal relief projects. The State with the least proportion of unemployed was Iowa, with 2.4 per cent registering as totally out of work and .9 per cent on Federal projects.

U. S. Ownership Of Coal Fields Urged by Earle

Nine Operators and Union Leaders Held in Favor of His Proposal.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 18.—Federal ownership of Pennsylvania's vast anthracite fields was advocated tonight by Gov. George H. Earle as the "only enduring" solution to the ills of the industry.

Earle said this decision was reached by two large operators, two union leaders, one independent producer and the Governor's own anthracite commission after a long conference at the Executive Mansion. The Governor said he will visit President Roosevelt Monday or Tuesday to enlist his support.

Purchase Involved.

Earle said the proposal would invilve the purchase of all hard coal lands in Pennsylvania by the Federal Government, which also would regulate marketing.

The lands would be sought first "at a reasonable purchase price," but if this could not be agreed upon, the properties would be condemned. The mines still would be operated by private industry, however, Earle said. The operators would obtain their leases from the Federal Government.

Monopoly Studied.

A study is being made to determine what action, if any, shall be taken concerning charges by Gov. Earle that "monopolistic practices" exist in the anthracite industry, President Roosevelt said at his press conference yesterday.

In response to another question, Mr. Roosevelt said he had no idea when he would send his promised message on new antitrust legislation to Congress.

Figures Earle gave him Monday concerning valuation of Pennsylvania anthracite properties were the most amazing he ever had seen, the President declared. Earle had told the President monopolistic practices in the anthracite coal region were accompanied by tremendous capital write-ups and pyramiding of costs.

In reply to other questions the President said he was getting along very well in these conferences with business and other groups. He said the six representatives of finance, labor and industry who met with him last Friday did not ask him for any specific program of action.

The President said it would be rather silly to give a dictionary definition of a holding company, and refused to amplify his statement he favors abolition of holding companies.

As soon as a definition was given, he added, some persons would try to put certain companies in the holding company category and others endeavor to keep other companies out.

Asked about the conferences he will hold today and Friday with business leaders and heads of automobile manufacturing and finance companies, the President said he expected to talk on any topic they wished to take up.

AFL Gets Plea To Join World Ban on Nippon

British Trades Unions Also Seek Alliance in Case of Attack.

By the United Press.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, last night referred to his executive council a proposal by British trade unions for an international boycott of Japan and for alliance of the United States, Great Britain, France, Russia and Holland in case of "a Japanese attack" on any of these nations or their territories.

The proposal was cabled to Green by Sir Walter Citrine, general secretary of the British Trade Union Congress and president of the International Federation of Trades Unions.

Specific Boycotts Asked.

Because of the drastic nature of Citrine's recommendations, Green decided, after talking with Citrine by transatlantic telephone, that they should be submitted to the executive council.

The proposals call upon the nations specified, with the British Dominions, to impose specific boycotts on Japanese products in addition to embargoing export of arms and munitions. Citrine told Green the program was laid before the international conference at Brussels three days ago "by the British labor movement," and that "a general negotiation must follow and not precede the re-establishment of respect for international obligations."

French Ask Support.

Green also received a telegram from L. Jouhaux, vice president of the French Federation of Labor, asking support at the world boycott conference in London, February 11-14. Green cabled:

"Federation here is applying boycott against Japanese goods and service vigorously and energetically. Labor and labor's friends are cooperating. Will support application Japanese boycott in every possible way."

Nolan, 2 Aides Go on Trial for Car Sale Fraud

45 Bills of Sale Sold Twice, Government Asserts.

Over objections of defense attorneys, John J. Wilson, assistant United States attorney yesterday succeeded in having placed in evidence 45 conditional bills of sale which were purchased from the Nolan Motor Co. and which, according to the Government, later were sold in duplicate by William J. Nolan and two of his associates to the Universal Credit Co.

Nolan and one of his former employes, Benjamin D. Jenkins, are on trial on 16 counts of obtaining money on false pretenses and one of conspiracy to do so. It took almost a day to obtain a jury and then Justice Joseph W. Cox decreed there should be a reserve juror, making 13 in all.

C. H. Pope, an officer of the Munsey Trust Co., identified the records of his bank, showing transactions which the Government claims connects Nolan to the frauds.

Wilson said he had more than 500 exhibits and 25 witnesses. He said he would call James F. Gallagher, former secretary to the now bankrupt Nolan firm, to the stand today. Gallagher, though indicted with the others, obtained a severance of his case and is not now on trial.

Clark Griffith

50 Years in Baseball

By Shirley Povich

Hired by Milwaukee at $225 a Month, Griffith Wins 25, Loses 11; Goes to Missoula Via Boston and St. Louis.

Chapter Four.

SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD CLARK GRIFFITH, now definitely embarked on a professional baseball career, clinched his first opportunity for advancement with no uncertain grip. Stepping to the mound for Bloomington of the Interstate League, on a July day in 1888, against Milwaukee of the Western Association in an exhibition game, he hurled Bloomington to victory.

The Milwaukee team, impressed with the slender home-town boy's pitching, bought Griffith from the Bloomington club that same day and hired him at a salary of $225 per month. Young Griffith, a sandlotter the summer before, now was but a step from the big leagues.

Manager James A. Hart of the Milwaukee Club lost little time in testing young Griffith's pitching ability in the Western Association. On July 23, 1888, Griffith was sent to the mound against St. Paul. He did not fail. The rookie right-hander held St. Paul to six hits and won his debut for Milwaukee, 8 to 1.

Said the Milwaukee Sentinel of the following day: "Young Griffith pitched a magnificent game for the Milwaukees, and, although St. Paul had men on base in almost every inning, they succeeded in getting but one man across the plate."

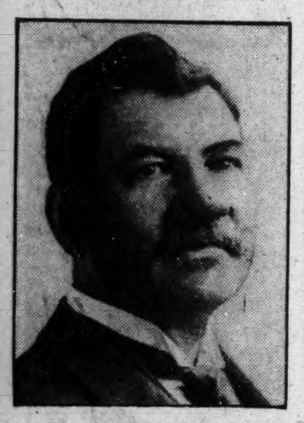
Among the nine men in that Milwaukee line-up on that July 23 day, 1888, were two were destined to become managers of the Washington team in the American League—Griffith and Outfielder Jimmy McAleer, Milwaukee lead-off man, who was to precede Griffith as the Washington manager.

Becomes Star Pitcher for Milwaukee.

EVIDENTLY GRIFFITH SET OUT early to prove to Milwaukee that he was no "flash in the pan." Five days later, on July 28, 1888, following Griffith's second start on the mound in the Western Association, the Milwaukee Sentinel reported:

"In the last two games which Griffith has pitched, the opposing club has gotten one run and six hits. If Griffith can keep the opponents to that average he will prove one of the best finds of the season."

By the following season, 1889, Griffith had blossomed as Milwaukee's star pitcher, and, in 1890, he compiled a record of 25 victories and only 11 defeats. Word of the skill of the little Western Association pitcher was spreading and, in the winter of 1890-91, famed Charley Comiskey, then manager and first baseman of the St. Louis Browns, induced Griffith to jump to the St. Louis club, which was operated by Chris Von Der Ahe, who reached the playing field simply by walking through the back door of his saloon.



CHRIS VON DER AHE, colorful tavern-keeping owner of St. Louis Browns in 1891.

Thus began the association of the veteran Comiskey and the youth Griffith, a relationship that, in succeeding years, was to have far-reaching effects on the history of big league baseball.

Von Der Ahe, a hearty German who knew little baseball but liked to associate with ballplayers, was one of baseball's most colorful characters. Each day after the game, he would dispatch two of his colored bartenders to the box office with a third with a musket and, in that fashion, they toted the day's gate receipts back to the saloon.

It was Von Der Ahe who gave to baseball and, later, to sports in general, the word "fan." It was during a St. Louis batting rally that Von Der Ahe listened to the customers' shouting and exclaimed, "Yah, vill you hear dose damn fan-anatics." From Von Der Ahe's "fanatics" was derived "fans."

Traded to Boston in Exchange for Easton.

ST. LOUIS WAS in the American Association, a major league, in 1891, and Griffith was enjoying tolerable success with the team, winning 11 games against 8 defeats. But, in midseason, he was traded to the Boston club of the same league in exchange for one Easton, a pitcher. Finishing the season of 1891 with Boston, he won three games and lost one.

That was the year when catchers, for the first time, were permitted to wear large padded mitts.

Boston, managed by Arthur Irwin and boasting such stars as Hugh Duffy, Mike Kelley and Dan Brouthers, won the American Association pennant in 1891, but Griffith's association with a pennant-winner was short-lived. Before the 1892 season opened, the American Association disbanded, and the National League occupied the major league field alone.

The 1892 season found Griffith pitching for Tacoma, Wash., in the Northern Pacific League—back in the minors. A sore arm he had developed at Boston at the tag end of the previous season made National League club owners skeptical and the little right-hander failed to catch on with a big league.

In minor league company at Tacoma, Griffith again was an outstanding star. In fact, it was his pitching that contributed so many Tacoma victories that the league broke up in August for want of sufficient competition for the Tacoma team.

Griffith again found himself without a job.

As the disconsolate Tacoma players, unpaid for weeks, pondered their future, the team manager received a telegram from Missoula, Mont., offering to hire the entire Tacoma club to represent Missoula in the outlaw Montana State League, at the same salaries their Tacoma contracts called for.

The Tacoma manager was skeptical that a small Montana town could live up to its word and told the players he was declining the offer.

It was then that 22-year-old Clark Griffith, who had been content to be a soldier in the ranks, first showed evidence of leadership. Grabbing up the discarded telegram from Montana, he called a meeting of the players, pointed out that they had little to lose and declared himself in favor of moving to Missoula. A chorus of "Yeahs" greeted his speech and the Tacoma team put itself under the management of the 22-year-old pitcher.

Wins First Game for Missoula With a Shutout.

MOVING INTO MONTANA, Griffith discovered that his team had contracted to play for a wild mining town in the flush of a boom. Missoula was wide open, gambling joints, saloons and honky-tonks crowding each other along the town's one main street. The town received its new ballplayers with gusto and saloonkeepers vied with each other in heaping hospitality on the athletes. Missoula was prepared to pay well for its ball team, which was operated by Lou Higgins, president of the Missoula bank and Lieutenant Governor of the State.

Griffith's opening pitching performance, a 6-0 victory for Missoula, set the little mining town mad. A Saturday night collection in the saloons netted $700 for Griffith, lesser amounts for all the players.

The following week-end, Missoula was to play its bitter rival, Helena, and Lieut. Gov. Higgins deposited with the clerk of Griffith's hotel $500 to be turned over to Griffith as a gift if the pitcher won the game.

Newspaper reports of that Missoula-Helena battle assert that $100,000 was wagered on the game by newly rich mining folks of the two communities. Despite the absence of his regular catcher, Mike Cody, who was in the stands after a night of fancy drinking, Griffith held a 4-3 lead over Helena until the ninth inning.

At that point, his secondstring catcher, Kid Spears, made the almost fatal mistake of letting one of Griffith's pitches skip through his mitt for a passed ball, and Helena's tying run scored from third base.

The Missoula folks were rabid. As Spears dashed back to the grandstand to retrieve the ball, he found himself looking into the muzzles of a half-dozen hastily produced six-shooters. Those miners did not intend to trifle.

"Son, never let that happen again," Spears was told.

That little gunplay affected Spears to the extent that he refused to risk another passed ball. At the end of the inning, he quit the game, leaving Griffith and the Missoula team catcher-less.

But the incident apparently had a sobering effect on Mike Cody, too. Down from the stands he came to volunteer to catch the rest of the game. A bit unsteady on his feet and strong of breath, Cody donned the catcher's paraphernalia and fearlessly stepped into the breach.

Missoula won the ball game, 5-4, and in that lush mining community in the year 1892, Clark Griffith was no less than Presidential timber.

TOMORROW: Griffith moves on to the Oakland, Calif., club, where he is a teammate of Joe Cantillon, destined to precede Clark Griffith as manager of Washington.

Carroll Shore, D. C. Court Star, Chosen for South American Tour

By Walter Haight.

Carroll Shore, considered one of the best basketball players ever developed in Washington, awaits word today from New York confirming his selection as a member of a team scheduled to tour South America for three months. The trip will be sponsored by the National A. A. U. as a "good will" tour and the itinerary includes stops in Chile, Brazil, Peru and Uruguay.

SHORE.

Shore is one of ten players chosen by C. L. Parsons, chairman of the national basketball committee. Through Winfree Johnson, local committeeman, Shore received an invitation yesterday and wired his acceptance to national headquarters. This is considered tantamount to confirmation.

While Shore virtually is assured the trip, the District may be doubly represented. The touring team may be placed in charge of Dave Keppel, well known District court official. Keppel has been "felt out" on the possibility of accompanying the team and he made known yesterday that he could make the trip.

Shore was first choice of District players named by the national committee. Donald Fones, a member of the Lubseal five, was named alternate.

Having played in practically every weight division of the District A. A. U. tournaments for more than a decade, Shore is well qualified to accept the honor, one which will bring Washington international recognition as a basketball center.

Shore, 23 years old, stands 5 feet, 10 inches and weighs 175 pounds. He has proved equally effective as guard and forward. In addition to being an accurate shot, he is an excellent defensive man and has few, if any peers hereabouts in general ball handling.

He played his way into national prominence in two National A. A. U. championship tournaments. He was with Sholl's five at Kansas City in 1933 and starred for the Rinaldi Tailors at Denver in 1935. Keppel was manager of the Tailors and his knowledge of the game, as well as his supervision of the players, attracted the attention of the A. A. U. officials.

Shore and Keppel were products of "basketball incubators," located on opposite sides of the city. Shore learned the rudiments of the game in the old Peck Memorial Church "gym," little more than an exaggerated piano box, but a hotbed of basketball in Georgetown. Despite the fact that he weighed less than 80 pounds, Shore won his spurs as a court regular

Lusby Leads Attack In 44 to 13 Victory

Roosevelt Hangs Up First Series Victory, Beating Central, 30-24; Sharpshooters of Eastern Dazzle Foes and Fans.

By Jack Munhall.

Any lingering doubts that Eastern is the team to beat in the interhigh basketball race were conclusively dispelled yesterday in Tech gym as the Lincoln Park team gave an awesome exhibition of power in trouncing Tech, 44-13, before 500 students. The victory lifted Eastern into first place, breaking a tie with Western.

In the second game of the double-header, Roosevelt captured its first victory of the series, topping Central, 30-24, in an exciting game, decided in the final five minutes. It was Central's third straight setback and removed it from any consideration as a title contender.

Eastern, improving with every start, played almost perfect basketball in overwhelming the game but outclassed Tech. Led by little Lee Lusby, just about the classiest performer in the series, the Northeast lads combined to show the spectators the deadliest shooting seen in high school ranks this season. During one period, beginning in the third and stretching into the fourth quarter, Eastern's sharpshooters poured 21 consecutive points through the hoops while holding McKinley scoreless.

Tech Bewildered.

Tech, although beaten handily, find solace in that it actually led Eastern at one stage of their game. Charley Curtis jumped the T-Streeters into a 4-0 lead in the opening minute before Eastern realized Tech was going to be stubborn. However, "Soup" Hancock tallied a foul and Clint Quantrille a basket and Eastern was soon finding the basket with monotonous regularity.

It was Lusby, Lombardy, Quantrille, Hancock and Lusby in a never-ending parade of two-pointers interspersed with an occasional foul shot as Tech's bewildered players fought in vain to stop the stream of Eastern points. After Eli Blank, who played well for the losers, scored a basket to open the second period, Tech was unable to locate the hoop again until the last minute of the third period.

Meanwhile, Eastern inaugurated the drive which rolled up 21 points in a row. The score at half was 28-8, at the end of the third quarter, 33-9.

Roosevelt Finish Wins.

Lusby and Quantrille were outstanding for Eastern. Lusby, a chubby, cherub-faced lad, was a source of continual discomfort to Tech, as he darted through to intercept passes and whisk them to waiting mates or to tally himself. He made 9 points, Quantrille 10 and Hancock 11.

The Central-Roosevelt game was, as anticipated, a thriller from start to finish with never more than five points separating the two until Roosevelt pulled away in the final minutes of play.

Roosevelt, trailing most of the way, picked up speed in the second half and deadlocked the score at 18-18 as the third quarter ended.

John Fanning, Central's star center, sent his team ahead as the fourth quarter opened by making good two free tries and following with a difficult one-hand shot. Here Roosevelt called a halt when Jimmy Robertson tossed in a set shot to leave the Riders behind, 24-22. Then Bill Love, who just ten minutes before had been carried from the floor with a turned ankle, tied the score as he broke loose for a snowbird.

Doyle Royal, substitute guard, clinched the decision for Roosevelt by flipping in a pair of field goals which offset a foul by Archie Panago and another charity heave by Fanning. Leading by 26-24 with the clock showing 55 seconds to play, Roosevelt widened its margin on baskets by Sylvan Stein and Zuras, both of which were the results of Central's frenzied passes.

500 Watch Riders Bow To St. John's

Little Gym Is Packed as Cadets Register 26-21 Cage Victory.

By Bob Garrison.

The little St. John's gym was packed to capacity with thrills and spectators yesterday afternoon as the Cadets continued their march through local schoolboy opposition by defeating Western High's basketball team, 26 to 21.

More than 500 persons watched as the prep school champions added the Georgetown five to their line of victories which now includes Tech, Mount St. Joseph's, of Baltimore, the Alumni and Calvert Hill. Only the strong Georgetown Frosh have been able to defeat the Cadets.

An early lead provided the margin of victory for the Vermont Avenue boys as they saw Western match them, point for point, in the second half and twice draw within 1 point of a tie. It was a one-man scoring show by Johnny Swagert, who registered 10 points in the last half that kept the Cadets ahead of the Westerners.

Western Trails at Half.

Western went into the second half trailing by 3 points, 14 to 11, as a result of some fancy long-range shooting by Joey Gallagher, who sank three straight baskets before the game was two minutes old to give his club a 6-to-2 lead. Other goals by Giebel and Swagert and another by Gallagher accounted for the first-half total as Ben Stanton, with 6 points, was leading the Western team.

Then it was that Swagert and the fans went wild. The tow-headed guard watched Gallagher open the half with a pot shot. Then, after Tommy Saylor and Bob Custer, of Western, had made it 16-15, St. John's scored from a block position. Bob Halloran matched that but Swagert arched one to the rafters and when the third quarter ended he had his club out in front, 20-17.

He Keeps Going.

He didn't slow up in the last quarter, either, quickly potting another from the middle of the floor to make it 22. Halloran interrupted him to flip in a foul shot and Saylor dribbled through the Cadets to add two more points before "Rosy" bagged his last two goals.

One was a one-handed toss from the foul-line and the last one, that gave the Cadets their twenty-sixth point, was a clever shot made from underneath the basket with a left-hand twist.

In the preliminary game, the Gonzaga Junior Varsity five defeated St. John's, 14-11.

Dobson Being Sought As Coach; But Where?

Reports that Frank Dobson, Maryland University football coach, is being sought by Mississippi State as successor to Maj. Ralph Sasse were without substantiation in Washington, last night.

It was learned, however, that authorities of Maryland University have been queried by the President of University of Mississippi in regards to the hiring of Dobson as coach at that school.

At Maryland, authorities said that Dobson is under no contract but is hired on a permanent basis. Dobson is believed to be well satisfied with his position at the College Park institution, where he has been employed for the past three years.

Sammy Baugh to Sign 3-Year Contract With Redskin Eleven

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 18.—Slingin' Samuel Adrain Baugh punctured the publicity bubble surrounding his alleged $25,000 salary demand today by announcing he probably would sign a three-year contract with the professional Washington Redskins within a few days.

The lanky football pitcher said he had no intention of becoming the Dizzy Dean of the gridiron and was anxious to ink his contract as soon as George Marshall, the Washington laundry king and Redskins owner, arrived in Dallas this weekend.

Baugh said he had conferred with Marshall and added he had two salary alternatives. One calls for a flat, one-year contract at "between $13,000 and $14,000," while the other is a three-year renewal of his old terms.

The "old terms," Baugh hinted, amounted to approximately $727 per game.

"One year's football at $13,000 or $14,000 is considerable money," drawled Sammy, "but I'm a pretty frail boy, you know, and I'm liable to go out any time. Suppose I signed for a one-year term; got hurt. I'd be through. Under terms of the three-year contract I am protecting myself for that length of time—broken leg, smashed career or not."

Baugh and the Redskins will play an exhibition game against the Chicago Bears here Sunday.

"Me get $25,000? Who ever heard of such a thing? Its the bunk—just publicity," he continued. "Salaries just don't come that high in professional football. The amount I made in my first year was very good for a youngster. It's tough going though—having those big fellows slam you around on the tail end of every pass. Guess maybe I earned that money."

Baugh said he still had his plans pointed toward a coaching career.

"Sure, I'm going to keep right on playing. It doesn't hurt to keep your name before the public when you are shooting for a coaching job. I'm learning more football all the time. You are bound to, however, when you keep right on playing. Remember, there are a bunch of pretty fair football players in that league."

Scheduled to play two more games after the Dallas date with the Bears, whom he rifled down for the professional title, Baugh said he

Day Second In Golf Meet

By the Associated Press.

Coral Gables, Fla., Jan. 18.—Tom Somerville's 78, 7 over par, was good enough to lead the first day's qualifiers in the Miami Biltmore amateur golf tournament today.

Somerville, of Wilmington, Del., put together a pair of 39s for his score, but with a bunch of favorites winging into action tomorrow—final day for qualifying—it looked as if he had a very slim chance of being medalist.

The Delaware shotmaker was one of only eight who broke 90 today. Larry Day, of Washington, D. C., was in second place with 38,42—80. Alone in third was Ray Jones, of Indianapolis, with 43, 40—83.

John O'Donnell, of Boston, and Charles Harris, of Allentown, Pa., were tied at 84.

Waiting until tomorrow to tackle the par 71 course was Melvin (Chick) Harbert, of Battle Creek, Mich., who carded a sensational 268 in winning the 72-hole Michigan open last July. Charles Mayo, jr., of New York, winner of the Miami midwinter amateur last week, and J. B. Ryerson, of Cooperstown, N. Y., who captured the Lake Worth open at Palm Beach, also planned to qualify tomorrow.

'Old Pete,' One of Baseball's Immortals, Enters Hall of Fame

By Alan Gould.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, Jan. 18.—To the list of baseball immortals in the Hall of Fame established at the game's birthplace in Cooperstown, N. Y., the official jury today added the name of Grover Cleveland Alexander, one of the great right-handed pitchers of all time.

"Old Pete," who ended a brilliantly colorful, but somewhat checkered career in 1930, after nearly 20 years in the National League, was the only star to qualify for the all-time galaxy in the third annual vote by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

With a minimum required total of 197 votes, or 75 per cent of the total cast, Alexander alone qualified for election by being the choice of 212 experts among 262 participating in the national poll. His elevation to the honor roll was forecast a year ago when he topped the list of players failing to get the necessary three-quarters vote.

Finishing short of the total essential to gain Hall of Fame entry were George Sisler, famous first baseman of the St. Louis Browns in the nineteen twenties; Wee Willie Keeler, great outfielder who spanned the century's turn in National League company, and Eddie Collins, long-time king of second basemen with the Athletics and White Sox. Their closely matched totals, respectively, were 179, 177 and 175.

The only others to receive more than 100 votes were, in order, George (Rube) Waddell, southpaw who gained fame first with the Athletics, 148; Frank Chance, one-time "peerless leader" of the Chicago Cubs, 133; Ed Delahanty, slugging king of his day, who ended up with Washington after a long National League career, 132; and Big Ed Walsh, iron man pitcher for the Chicago White Sox, 110.

Alexander becomes the ninth of the so-called "modern" group of super-stars voted into the hall of fame. The baseball writers' polls have been restricted to players active since 1900 but no longer in competition at the time of the vote. The first five choices were Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Christy Mathewson, Hans Wagner and Walter Johnson. Last year Nap LaJoie, Tris Speaker and Cy Young were added to the list.

Major league club owners, in joint session last December, voted to include the two most famous managerial figures of all time, Connie Mack and John McGraw, in addition to George Wright, pioneer player and manager; Morgan Bulkeley, first National League president, and Byron Bancroft Johnson, organizer and first president of the American League.

Alexander's right to join baseball's most celebrated company, for historical purposes, is backed up by a remarkable pitching record, spread over the period of 1911 to 1930 with the Phillies, Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals. "Alex the Great" came up to the big show by way of Galesburg, Ill., and Syracuse, N. Y., at a time when Mathewson was the king pitcher of the National League. Their paths crossed for three seasons and developed many memorable duels before Alexander won the right to the hurling crown.

Alexander won 28 games in his fisst mapor league season, still a modern record for a freshman. He won 30 or more games in three consecutive years, 1915-17, a feat achieved only by the immortal Matty in this century. Although he never pitched a no-hitter, Alex set an all-time record by hurling four one-hit victories in 1915.

Some of Alexander's other records included: Most National League games pitched (696) and won (373); a major league mark, shared with Walter Johnson, of leading his league in the number of complete games pitched for six years; a National League earned run mark of 1.22 for pitchers working in 250 innings or more; 90 shutouts, a life-time league record, and 16 whitewashings in one season, 1916, for a major league mark.

Alexander pitched in three world series, but is best remembered for his heroic relief role in 1926, when he emerged from the bullpen in the rain at the Yankee Stadium to save the seventh and final game for the St. Louis Cardinals. Legend persists that "Old Pete," who had pitched and won the sixth game to tie the count at 3-all, was dozing when summoned unexpectedly in the seventh inning to face Tony Lazzeri, with two out, the bases filled, and the Cardinals fighting to hold a 3-2 lead.

Astonishment gave way to dramatic excitement as Alexander trudged to the box, calmly surveyed the situation, and struck out Lazzeri. The balance of the game was an anti-climax as "Old Pete" finished his job in business-like fashion. It is worthy of note that the Yankees have not lost a world series since then.

Alexander was born at St. Paul, Nebr., in 1887. After seven brilliant years with the Phillies, he was sold, with his batterymate, Bill Killefer, to the Chicago Cubs for $55,000 and several players. Alex pitched the opening game of the abbreviated 1918 season for the Cubs, but soon responded to the service call, and went to France with the A. E. F. He rose to the rank of sergeant.

Two New Nominations for Hall of Fame.

By Shirley Povich.

It is entirely meet and proper that a niche in baseball's Hall of Fame at Cooperstown, N. Y., has been awarded Grover Cleveland (Old Pete) Alexander. Old Pete's service in the National League overlapped two generations of ball players. He served the Phillies, the Cubs and the Cardinals with distinction, and there can be no quarrel with his selection as a pillar of the pastime.

POVICH.

In the agate type of the baseball record books reposes a long history of Alexander's feats on the mound, but he is best known, not for the longevity of his pitching brilliance, but for one brief appearance in a setting that had the natural trappings of baseball drama.

The was in the world series game of 1926, when the St. Louis Cardinals were battling the Yankees at Yankee Stadium. Alexander wasn't working that day. In fact, he was dozing peacefully in the bullpen while the battle raged about him. He had been in the midst of world series play before—with the Phils and Cubs. This was old stuff to Old Pete.

And then he was jostled out of his doze. Manager Rogers Hornsbuy, of the Cardinals, was sending for him. Seems that the Yankees were staging a batting rally in the seventh and the Cardinal's lead was being threatened. Old Pete looked up to see the bases full of Yanks and Tony Lazzeri at bat.

In front of the Cardinals' dugout Hornsby was waving frantically in Alexander's direction. He needed a relief pitcher. In the hour of his desperation he was turning to Old Pete. Still strong of breath and a bit sunsteady of gait, Old Pete was willing. He languidly took a few warm-up pitches, shuffled lazily toward the pitching mound.

Old Pete Saves the Day.

He stopped for a whispered consultation with Hornsby, nodded his head in understanding. With a gesture that eloquently bespoke his fervent prayer, Hornsby slapped Old Pete on the back, gave him a gentle shove in the direction of the mound, and went back to play second base for the Cardinals.

You know what happened. How Old Pete, his dented cap perched comically on his shaggy head, faced Lazzeri with an utter lack of emotion. How he reared back and threw three strikes to Lazzeri. How he struck him out to save the ball game. Folks may forget how many games Grover Alexander won during his career, how many pennants he helped to win, but they won't forget that nervy and nerveless exhibition against Tony Lazzeri that October day, 1926.

What About the Goose?

But if it's nominations for the Hall of Fame that the baseball folks are looking for, we'd like to unburden ourselves of a couple. Our nominees may be no great shucks as founding fathers of the game or brilliant contributors to baseball's history, but at least they have one famous play to their credit.

Our first nominee is Goose Goslin, who was one of the earliest masters of fielding an outfield fly with his skull. Goslin is famed as the No. 1 tanglefoot outfielder of the big leagues in his rookie days, even antedating Brooklyn's Babe Herman, who always could be depended upon either to (1) make a spectacular catch of a fly ball or (2) suffer a serious scalp wound in the attempt.

But the feat that we believe should land Goslin in the hall of fame happened not in a regular game but in an exhibition affair between the Nats and the Phillies at Clearwater, Fla., in 1926. Goslin had just whacked out a vicious line drive two-bagger that moved George Sisler to third base.

On the next pitch, Goslin, suddenly inspired, attempted to steal third, quite oblivious that Sisler was on the bag. Other guys have unsuccessfully tried to steal an occupied base, but Goslin embellished his effort by sliding into the bag so fiercely that he spiked his teammate, Sisler, putting him out of the game for a week.

It was on that occasion that Goslin, as he sadly made his way to the bench after his faux pas, was greeted by the late Joe Cantillon with the classic remark: "I don't blame you, Goose; you had a great lead off second."

Rice Deserves Vote.

Our second nomination for the Hall of Fame is Sam Rice, who executed something of a masterpiece when, during a crucial series in the West, he gummed up a sacrifice bunt play that cost the Nats the ball game.

Rice was on first base when Manager Bucky Harris gave the signal for the bunt. The batter received the signal and then looked at Rice for confirmation that Rice was in on the play. The Nats' code at the time was a so-called "flesh-to-flesh" arrangement. Rice merely had to clasp his hands, put his hands to his face or indicate by any "flesh to flesh" sign that he understood.

But the hitter, watching Rice steadily, saw no confirmation of the play forthcoming and at the last decided to swing instead of bunt. He popped up, and his failure to sacrifice cost the Nats the tying run.

Manager Bucky Harris, who had watched the proceedings, loudly bawled out Rice for his failure to acknowledge the bunt sign.

Rice had an alibi. Harris demanded to know what it was. Rice declared he had given the "flesh-to-flesh sign. In what way? demanded Harris.

"I was snapping my fingers out there," said Rice.

Paradisical Used Up in Early Stage

Mare Wins First Race in New Colors of Mrs. D. A. Headley.

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Jan. 18.—Sparta, sporting the brand new silks of Mrs. D. A. Headley, easily defeated six other members of the so-called weaker sex in the featured fifth event here today, thereby proving a grand wedding present. Last fall, when Trainer Duval Headley married Dorothy Graham, of Detroit, Uncle Hal Price Headley, famous Kentucky racing man and breeder, presented his nephew and niece with the horse, and today was the first time that the navy blue and white stripes had shown in competition for the young couple.

Sparta, a 5-year-old daughter of St. Germans, won by two lengths from Mrs. Payne Whitney's Drowsy, while Paradisical, representing I. J. Collins and favorite, lost the place by three lengths. Sparta paid $6.70 and ran the seven furlongs in 1:25 flat. Neither the winner nor Drowsy had started since the fall, while Paradisical won at the current meeting.

While the Headleys looked on, Sparta was perfectly ridden by "Big Time" Charlie Kurtsinger. The Louisville Teuton waited in third place, letting Paradisical and Grey Fluff use themselves up vying for the lead. When asked to run, Sparta bounded to the front entering the front lane. She drew out with little effort to hold the fast closing Drowsy at bay. Paradisical saved the show by two lengths from Millie M.

Third Degree, a bay son of Questionnaire, making his debut in the famous silks of Mrs. Payne Whitney, ran according to advance reports in winning the three furlong dash. The colt needed a powerful ride from long-faced Eddie Arcaro to squeeze out a photo decision over Our Mat, which had finished second in his premiere. Pit Terrier was third, five lengths behind. Our Mat rushed to the front and held on gamely, but could not withstand the steady challenge of Third Degree, which drove up on the outside to pay $4.40. The time was 0:34 4-5.

Cravat, a colt which Townsend B. Martin purchased out of the C. V. Whitney dispersal sale at Pimlico last fall for $10,600, made his first start in the new silks and finished a game but unfortunate second in the photo finish of the fourth race. The purse fell to Mythical King, which took the lead from Allanwood around the last turn and lasted to pay $11.70. Cravat, far out of it coming out of the mile chute, improved his position on the inside and was an easy second over Feng, the choice.

Feedman, a plater that has been close to winning form, found the right spot in the third race of six furlongs. The colt was a $5 for $2 choice, but had a hard time winning. He got up to head Miss Oak for the purse, while Time and Again was another head behind. Wayne Wright rated Feedman behind the pace cut out by Time and Again and Miss Oak, drove his mount to the limit through the stretch and was rewarded right at the wire.

The 8-year-old gelding Crowning Glory found his racing legs in the seven-furlong second event and drove home ahead of 11 other platers. Ralph Eccard booted the $17 for $2 shot to the wire a length and a half clear. Buttermilk, the favorite, came with a belated rush Spot, last to get off, closed a world to be second by a head, while Four of ground to finish third. Crowning Glory shook off Noble Boy after a half mile and had enough left to make the grade under pressure.

THIRD DEGREE, quickest to begin, went in close attendance of OUR MAT in the early stages, responded courageously to a vigorous hand ride and got up in the closing strides. OUR MAT, got going swiftly, took a short lead in the opening sixteenth mile, and held on tenaciously when the final issue came, but could not stave off the winner's bid. CROWNING GLORY, breaking forwardly, forced a steady early pace and raced NOBLE BOY into submission, drew clear on the stretch turn, but was ridden vigorously the remainder of the trip to maintain his lead. BUTTERMILK, in all sorts of difficulty in the early running, sought her way through when straightened into the stretch and closed with a belated rush. She ran as if the best. FOUR SPOT, off poorly, began to better his position on the extreme outside in the last half, and wore SANG FROID down in the last strides.

FEEDMAN, going prominently under light restraint in the opening half mile, closed with determination on the outside when placed to punishment, wore his opponents down in the last stride. MISS OAK, in close attendance of the leader and saving ground all the way, held on with excellent courage in the final drive. TIME AND AGAIN, quickest to get going, assumed a short lead in the early stages, but faltered slightly in the final drive.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (chute). Purse, $1,100; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:30. Off 3:31. Winner, B. F. Whitaker's b. c. MYTHICAL KING, stealing through on the inside approaching the half-mile pole, took command, was steadied in front until well into the stretch, responded gamely to pressure and outlasted CRAVAT. The latter, slow to get going, improved his position steadily in the last three furlongs while saving ground and was wearing the winner down in the final strides. FENG, rated off the pace in the early running, was unable to better his position when called upon.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPARTA, $6.70, $3.80, $2.60; DROWSY, $5.20, $2.80; PARADISICAL, $2.30.

SPARTA followed the leaders under slight restraint while saving ground in the early running, came to the outside entering the stretch, moved up with determination and drew out in the final furlongs. DROWSY, well handled, gradually bettered her position when placed to pressure, but could not reach the winner and was not unable to the final drive. PARADISICAL, in the thick of contention, raced GREY FLUFF into defeat in the opening five furlongs, took command entering the stretch, but was unable to keep stride with her opponents.

SIXTH RACE—One mile (chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:31. Off 4:33. Winner, Medway Stable's ch. f. PELTER, breaking rapidly, drew clear with a rush in the run out of the chute, was then steadied in front and held away the entire trip, winning with something to spare. TOP BILLING, lightly restrained early, moved up steadily in the final three furlongs, but never seriously threatened the winner. PASSABLE, stealing through on the inside after leaving the backstretch, easily disposed of WESTY'S HERO.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:01. Off 5:02. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHITE GINGER, $10.40, $4.60, $3.50; PEEDEEQUE, $9.30, $5.10; PUNDIT, $7.40.

WHITE GINGER, off forwardly, followed the leaders under stout restraint until leaving the backstretch, moved to the front rapidly when placed to pressure, drawing out through the stretch to win in hand. PEEDEEQUE moved up with a rush midway around the lower turn, but could not overtake the winner. PUNDIT, slow to find his stride, gained steadily under pressure and was easily best of the others.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:30. Off 5:34. Winner, C. J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHRYSMUTE, $13.80, $6.60, $5.00; MISS CAPERS, $9.70, $6.20; INSCRIPTION, $5.40.

CHRYSMUTE, steadied off the early pace, closed courageously through the stretch when placed to punishment and outlasted her opposition in the final drive. MISS CAPERS, a forward contender and saving ground early, swung around the leader entering the stretch, made a game bid when called upon, but could not get up. INSCRIPTION, keen contender from the start, assumed command midway around the turn, saved ground the remainder of the trip, but faltered when challenged. LEGIONARY pulled up decidedly lame.

Chancer Rewards His Backers $44.80

New Orleans, Jan. 18 (AP).—Chancer, 5-year-old gelded son of Chance Play, owned by P. Andolino, scored a surprise victory when he whipped seven other platers in the 6-furlong feature at the Fairgrounds.

Making his first start at the New Orleans oval after winning only three of his 30 starts last year, Chancer moved up from second place at the head of the stretch to whip Mrs. G. B. Scallon's Bartering Kate and pay $44.80 for $2. Bartering Kate, the early pacemaker, held E. Drillon's Yule Star safe for runner-up honors.

G. W. U. to Oppose Long Island Five

Local Team, Blackbirds Meet Tonight

Colonial Cagers, Undefeated in 6 Games, Seek 'Big' Victory.

George Washington University's smooth-sailing basketball team will load its undefeated record on a New York-bound express train this afternoon to risk it against the Long Island University five tonight. It will be the first out-of-town game for the local club.

Boasting victories over Minnesota and Ohio State, among others, the downtown school is sending a team that has given promise of attaining prominence in Eastern court circles.

Five times this season the Colonials have played and five times they have triumphed. First it was Baltimore that fell victim, then Tennessee, Minnesota, Ohio State and Elon in that order.

Although Minnesota defeated Long Island in New York several days before it lost to George Washington, the New Yorkers will probably be slight favorites.

Uses Zone System.

Not since they first met six years ago has George Washington managed to defeat a Claire Bee combination. The Colonials won that first game, but have not been able to duplicate the stunt. They played the Blackbirds twice last year and seemed to exhibit their poorest brand of basketball on each occasion.

The Colonials have been drilling hard and earnestly for the game, having scrimmaged with Georgetown University's team and the freshman team in an effort to solve the zone defense they are expected to meet in the narrow Long Island University gym.

Coach Bill Reinhart, who has been watching the Colonials bow to Long Island for three years, has been employing the zone defense himself for the first time. He varied it with the orthodox man-for-man style and has concentrated on a fast-breaking offense.

Butterworth May Play.

Much depends on the condition of Jack Butterworth, center, who injured his leg in the Elon game and who will have to play with a brace supporting his injured limb. Should he be forced from the game, Reinhart plans to shift Sid Silkowitz to center and insert Arnold Auerbach at guard. George Garber will be at the other guard post and Bob Faris and Tommy O'Brien will be at forward.

Following this game, the Colonials lay off for 10 days with midyear examinations, then embark on an extended trip to meet West Virginia, Butler, Loyola, Wayne and Toledo.

Long Island will be met in a return game here, February 22.

Keller, Ex-Terp, Will Take Bride

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (AP).—Charlie Keller, Newark outfielder and leading 1937 hitter of the International League—his first year in professional baseball—will marry Martha Lee Williamson, recently athletic instructor at Friends School here.

They obtained a license today and Mrs. Robert E. Lee Williamson, her mother, said the marriage would take place this week. Keller, former University of Maryland athlete, is 21 and Miss Williamson is 20.

Keller wouldn't say where the marriage would be, or when—adding he didn't want a lot of people piling in.

Orthodox Londos Vies Against New-Fangled Rassle Tactics

Modern wrestling, that bizarre combination of acrobatics, drama and comedy, and its latest disciple, Dr. John (Dropkick) Murphy, will vie against orthodox mat science and its high priest, Jim Londos, tomorrow night in what promises to be the best of the winter mat shows at Joe Turner's Arena.

Murphy, one of the most unusual wrestlers in a business that thrives on the unusual, created a furor on last week's wrestling card when he pinned Paddy Mack. He stole the show from Bronko Nagusurski, the transplanted Minnesota footbal player, and was chosen by Turner as the likeliest opponent for the Greek champion.

That sobriquet of "Dropkick was tagged to his name almost from the day he started wrestling because of his favorite delivery of the dropkick as a means of offense and defense. When the Bostonian was ready for the "kill" against Mack, he leaped into the air and four times used Mack as a human football, each time dropkicking Mack to the canvas.

Dr. Murphy had been an all-round athlete at University of Alabama. He actually used his wrestling profits to send him through four years at the Middlesex School of Surgery and Medicine in Boston, from where he was graduated last June.

In New England, "Dropkick" Murphy is a name in wrestling as famous as Crusher Casey, Danno O'Mahoney, Gus Sonnenberg, Strangler Lewis and Jim Londos.

Judging by the reception accorded him last Thursday, the physician, only one in the mat game today, threatens Londos' popularity.

The supporting card for the Londos-Murphy match was completed yesterday.

Kiman Kudo, the Japanese jiu jitsu expert, will meet Dick Daviscourt, the California professor, in a special 30-minute match, a semi-windup on the card. Special jackets will be worn by the contestants. It will be the first jiu jitsu match ever held at the arena.

Chief Chewacki, the Oklahoma Indian, who used a coat hanger on Al Periera last week, meets John Grandovich, of Russia. Pat Meehan, British empire title-holder, faces Hans Von Blumberg, of Germany, and Sammy Stein, of movie and football fame, opposes Henry Kulkovich, the Russian.

Little Hoyas Win, 23-18

Georgetown Prep registered its fifth win of the basketball season at the expense of the Rockville High's team, yesterday, in the Rockville gym, 23-18.

A lead of 11-4 proved too much for the Maryland team as Earl Nadler and Frank Zayas combined to lead the Garrett Park team to victory. Sharp-shooting by Woodward, the oRckville center, made him the high-point scorer with 9 points.

Sammy Baugh

hadn't tired of playing despite the long schedule.

"After that Chicago game for the title on that icy field, Sammy had enough football," he grinned. "But then I came on down home, rested up for a couple of weeks, and now I'm ready for more. Rain ruined our game on the Pacific Coast last week. Say, I hope this sunshine continues here—I'm ready to play another game in Texas."

Baugh to Sign With Cardinals.

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Sammy Baugh, who reportedly drew $7,500 for his football season with the Washington Redskins, announced today he would sign a contract to play baseball this year with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Baugh, who has been having salary trouble with George P. Marshall, Redskins' owner, said Marshall had agreed he could play baseball during the spring. He has decided to work out at third base, although it has not been determined what position he will play.

Baugh scoffed at the rumor he was holding out for $25,000 contract with the Redskins. "It is ridiculous to say that a professional football team could pay that salary, and I have never asked for it. However, I have asked a substantial increase over this season's figure," he added.

Enrico Venturi Suspended.

New York, Jan. 18.—The State Boxing Commission today suspended Enrico Venturi, Italian lightweight, and his manager, Carmine Tarantino, for 120 days because of "unsatisfactory" incidents connected with last Wednesday's bout with Featherweight Champion Henry Armstrong.

Blair Girls' Five Wins.

Montgomery-Blair's girl basketball team defeated Rockville last night in a 22-14 game. Helen Rundbold scored 11 points to lead the winners' attack.

Fordham Swimmers Win.

New York, Jan. 18.—Fordham University's swimming team defeated Villanova's Paddlers, 37 to 34, today.

Gallagher Kayoed by Lewis in 3d

Marty Suffers 1st Knockout of His Career in St. Louis.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 18.—When John Henry Lewis knocks 'em out, he usually needs a dozen or more right-hand shots to the jaw. The champion from Phoenix, Ariz., fooled a crowd of 8,442 when he flattened Marty Gallagher, veteran Washington, D. C., heavyweight, with one punch, a left hook, to the chin in the third round here tonight.

For two rounds the big Irishman gave the Negro, light-heavyweight champion, a fair-sized fight and the fans settled back in their seats, entirely unprepared for what was going to happen in the third.

Lewis' weighing 181 pounds to 209¾, found Gallagher troublesome for the first two rounds and also rough. But the champion, shifting from his right-hand attack that failed to find any part of Marty's chin in the first two chapters, suddenly lashed out with a sweeping left hook that caught the Celt smack on the button. Gallagher went down in a heap, resting on his glove tips, wondering what it was all about when Referee Walter Heisner tolled off the count.

The champion, whose title was not on the block, started cautiously, but it wasn't long before he began pitching with a lot on the ball. Marty escaped this early fire, roughed Lewis in the clinches and managed to reach John's body occasionally with two-fisted drives.

The end came after 2 minutes 50 seconds of the third, and Gallagher had all his "buttons" at the time. Cuffing and shoving each other around near the ropes, Lewis pay-off wallop came so fast that few persons followed it. The stunned Gallagher was still groggy when his seconds, Tim McNamara and Billy McCarney, hoisted him to his wobbly legs.

Shore, D. C. Boy, to Tour

on the Peck 115-pound team which competed in the local A. A. U. tournament.

As his teammates grew heavier and were forced to move up the tournament scale in the next few years, Shore failed to match their physical strides and played in the 130-pound class while weighing slightly over 90 pounds.

He entered Tech High and, despite his small stature and his 95 pounds, participated in several games and was one of the fastest and most polished youngsters to show in the series. Tech was swarmed with good, big boys at the time so the following season found Shore at Business High. During the summer he had sprouted into a 125-pounder and was growing. If it was revenge he was seeking, he got it, for his team scored a one-point victory over Tech.

Shore not only was a good basketball player, but he was a restless one. He made himself some sort of an "all-high" player by appearing the following year in a Central uniform. At the completion of his high school career, Shore played with a host of independent teams before entering Georgetown University as a freshman.

Shore played with the Hilltop varsity last year and was selected on the "All-District" team.

Keppel developed his basketball on the Plaza Playground, mecca for Northeast youngsters, before it was ruled an eyesore and turned into a beautiful but nonproductive park. Keppel never weighed more than 120 pounds as a player and he competed only with the best, making up for lack of heft with "do-or-die" aggressiveness, a masterful eye and keen court strategy.

Keppel is best remembered as a player for his work with the Stantons, Steward Photographers, Liberty and Knights of Columbus. He finally left the action to larger fellows and became the manager and coach of a number of teams. He has been a District approved official for eight years and has refereed college, scholastic, league and independent games.

Keppel and Shore admitted last night that they knew little, if any, Spanish. However, Shore said, "If we are accepted, we're going to start learning 'manana.'"

Saltzgaver, Makosky Are Dropped by Yanks

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—The New Nork Yankees cut Otto (Jack) Saltzgaver, utility infielder, and Frank Makosky, right-handed pitcher, off their pay roll today.

Saltzgaver, used mostly as a pinch-hitter last season, when he batted .182 in 17 games, was released on option to Kansas City. Makosky was released optionally to Newark. Restricted almost entirely to relief roles, Makosky appeared in 26 games in 1937 and won 5 and lost 2.

Y. M. C. A. Sports.

With the No. 2 ranking hinging on the outcome, the singles match between George Wendlandt and Walter Engelhardt will be the main attraction in tonight's ninth and final round of the Y. M. C. A. round robin handball tournament. All other rankings seem fairly well settled.

Other matches tonight:

Gillette vs. Woodrack; Moore vs. Schwartz; Newman vs. Goldstein; Payne vs. Mangan; Goldstein-Nash vs. Vineberg-Woodward, and Payne-Berman vs. Wondrack-Engelhardt.

Georgetown Girls Win.

The Georgetown A. C. girls held their lead in the Civic Basketball League last night, swamping Secretary Club, 55-7, in a game played in Wilson gym.

Wheat Prices Decline With Bad Weather

Sinking European Demand Aids in Driving Prices Down.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Proving more as an immediate market factor than did recurrence of Kansas dust storms, heavy wet snowfalls in Nebraska today pulled wheat values down.

Persistent slackness of European demand for North American wheat counted also as weight on prices. It was doubted that export purchases of North American wheat today would total even 200,000 bushels.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures, after showing a maximum fall of 1⅞ cents were ¼@¾ under yesterday's finish, May, 96⅝@96¾; July, 91⅛@91¼. Corn, ⅛@⅜, advanced; May, 60⅝@60¾; July, 61. Oats exactly unchanged. Rye, ¼ off to ⅛ up. Provisions unchanged to 15 cents down.

The market opened 2 to 4 points lower following easier foreign markets, but there was enough trade buying to hold fluctuations within a narrow range during the early trading. Toward midday, increased Wall Street selling sent prices lower and traders found little reason to buy owing to the generally easier tendency of all markets.

1937 Building Increased 9% Over Year Ago

Construction Awards at Highest Level in Six Years.

New York, Jan. 18.—The amount of construction undertaken during 1937 reached a six-year peak. Total contracts awarded in the 37 Eastern States attained the highest dollar value for any year since 1931, according to T. S. Holden, vice president of F. W. Dodge Corporation. In residential building, it is necessary to turn back to 1930 to find a total which can match the 1937 volume.

Contracts awarded in the 37 Eastern States for 1937 amounted to $2,913,060,000, according to the report. This total represents an increase of 9 per cent over the 1936 total of $2,675,296,000.

All classes of construction shared in the improved conditions during 1937 with the exception of public works. In the case of residential building, the 1937 total of $905,292,800 recorded a gain of 13 per cent over last year. This was the highest annual total for any year since 1930. Nonresidential building amounted to $1,148,172,600 for 1937, an increase of 20 per cent over 1936. Public utility contracts totaled $277,730,100, a gain of 34 per cent over last year. For public works the 1937 total of $581,864,500 represented a 19 per cent loss from the 1936 volume.

In reviewing the 1937 construction program, Mr. Holden pointed out that privately financed work continued the upward trend which started in 1935 by recording a percentage gain of 31 per cent over last year. In only two months out of the year did the 1937 totals fail to exceed the 1936 totals for corresponding months.

The December, 1937, contract record for the 37 States totaled $209,450,600, of which $43,479,500 was for residential, $101,210,300 for nonresidential, $46,474,800 for public works and $18,286,000 for public utilities.

$50,000,000 Bills 3 Times Subscribed

Acting Secretary Magill announced last evening that the tenders for $50,000,000, or thereabouts, of 91-day Treasury bills, to be dated January 19 and to mature April 20, 1938, which were offered on January 14, were opened at the Federal Reserve banks on January 17.

The total applied for was $160,075,000, of which $50,130,000 was accepted.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Continue Down in Slow Trade as Erie Goes Under; U. S. Govt. Bonds Firm.

New York, Jan. 18.—United States Government bonds were firm and gold stocks were sought, but other stocks and commodities declined. Stocks were hurt by the Erie Railroad bankruptcy, but they acted weakly throughout in slack trading. May wheat lost five-eighths of a cent at 96¾ cents a bushel. French francs weakened.

The stock market was wounded in several places, in some of which firing had been expected, and a forward movement over any particular sector proved to be impossible. Liquor shares were knocked down by the price cutting announced by one large distiller, the interpretation of that action being that sales had fallen sharply and that consequently profits were declining. All the liquor shares had to take a good deal of liquidation and fell 1 to 2 points.

Demand for Gold.

In early afternoon the railroad stock and bond market lurched heavily under the impact of a threatened bankruptcy for the Erie Railroad. Directors voted to file a petition in bankruptcy—unless perhaps the RFC did not come through quickly with a loan, something which Chairman Jones suggested he would not do. The incident raised fears that the RFC might be a hard-boiled egg over other applications, now pending or to be made in future as the railroads developed need for cash. Rail shares dropped 1 to 2 points.

Only the gold stocks as a group gladdened the hearts of stock buyers. Homestake again led the procession in mounting about 2 points to a new high price. Doubts over a business recovery, with the ghost of inflation sitting at the table loaded with taxation and a mounting Government debt, are consistent with an escape of capital into gold. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, General Electric and nearly all the leading common stocks declined a point or so. Here and there a preferred stock was bid up.

Skeptical of Change.

Speculative markets clearly have been acting as though a good deal of the recent hoopla over co-operation between the New Deal and big business would have to be heavily discounted. As the matter always has been viewed in Wall Street, the question is not one of co-operation, which implies that businessmen have been working to thwart the Government. If business has found the tax laws, the utility campaign, the labor tactics and the general trend of economic policy of the Government as handicapping a business revival, the matter is not a state of mind.

Business would gladly go ahead even if as individuals businessmen disapproved of the measures taken by the politicians. That was shown conclusively in 1935 and 1936. What has been holding business back and what has brought on the present business depression is the taking effect of the bad medicine administered business by the Washington doctors over the past few years. The patient will forgive the bad diagnosis and the bad medicine if only he can get out of the hospital and get a little rest, plain food and fresh air.

That point was most succinctly made by Thomas W. Lamont in his address at Philadelphia Monday afternoon. Adapting the phraseology of the labor movement, Mr. Lamont refuted the contention of President Roosevelt and his spokesmen that business and banking are on strike against the Government in an attempt to coerce the New Deal. He said the condition was one in which capital was being locked out. Capital and business are more than willing to work if given the chance. Business will use capital if it can get it and keep at least some of the profits made from the use of it. The banking laws on underwriting shutting off a huge reservoir of much-needed capital from industry, need revision. Undistributed profits and capital gains taxation need revision. Businessmen and bankers need relief from the constant abuse and threats poured upon them from Washington.

Bonus Begets Bonus.

As the business depression wears on the number of ill-considered proposals for recovery are bound to increase. A fair sample of what to expect is the proposal made by an automobile statistical service, and which undoubtedly has the support of at least some motor car producers. It is for a $210,000,000 purchase of used cars by the United States Government, in order to relieve the market and open a new field quickly for new-car sales. Such salvage as the Government might get out of the junk, after paying transportation costs, would be its own for keeps and without further subsidy. Such a splendid spending scheme naturally would stimulate the motor car industry and hence give aid to the steel and certain other industries.

However, the depression we now are having has followed several years of pump priming, bonuses, subsidies and all manner of spending in a blind attempt to work out of the depression. Fortunately some of the New Deal leaders, including the Secretary of the Treasury, have learned their bonus lessons. They are beginning to realize that to pile up debt for the sake of this or that industry, locality, community, class of people and the like only quickens the pace of the day of reckoning. What a mass of proposals for industrial subsidies would follow a motor subsidy! We have too many now, what with our farm program, our shipping schemes, our airplane mail subsidies, our indirect motor car subsidies in the form of Federal aid for road building and many others of one kind or another. Subsidies might well be scrapped for a while as a means of relief for a much harassed taxpayer and as a way for insuring confidence in a currency based on a balanced budget.

Banking Position.

The figures of weekly reporting member banks in 101 cities as of January 12 reflect the heavy return flow of holiday currency. Reserves rose $127,000. Member bank credit continued to decrease, the drop in loans being $31,000,000, about half of which was in the commercial category. Of the decrease in commercial loans only $6,000,000 was in New York. On the investment side of the picture the position was more interesting. The reporting banks bought $116,000,000 of Government and other securities. The increase of $68,000,000 in other securities, mainly in New York, reflected the recent sale of New York State bills. Deposits increased throughout the country, the aggregate gain in demand deposits adjusted being $244,000,000. Balance of domestic banks went ly $40,000,000, and deposits of foreign banks were $9,000,000 lower.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Jan. 18 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agri.).—Little activity was being reported in the Boston wool market today. Mills were not buying enough wool to establish market prices. On the other hand, there was no particular pressure to sell. In view of the decline in prices in Australian and New Zealand wool markets since the first of year year, reports of the opening in London were being awaited with a great deal of interest by members of the Boston trade.

A Million Jobs Lost in 2 Months

New York, Jan. 18.—The number of persons unemployed in the United States increased sharply in November to 10,144,000 from 9,203,000 in October and from the recovery low of 8,981,000 in September, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute. Thus 1,163,000 persons were added to the ranks of the unemployed in a period of two months. In November, for the first time in 1937, unemployment was greater than in the corresponding month of the previous year. In November, 1936, there were 9,985,000 persons unemployed, or 159,000 fewer than in the same month of 1937.

It is probable than unemployment showed a further increase in December with a decrease in factory employment more than offsetting a gain in retail trade employment. Another sharp increase in unemployment is in prospect for January as the result of the seasonal curtailment of retail trade.

In the Government's unemployment census taken in November, 7,823,000 persons registered themselves as unemployed, but a considerable number of unemployed persons failed to report.

Exchange Plans Reorganization

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—The special committee studying reorganization of the New York Stock Exchange will probably recommend creation of a paid president with a chairman of the board to act in an advisory capacity, it was reported in well informed quarters today.

The committee, headed by Carle C. Conway, president of Continental Can Co., is now in process of drafting its report after several weeks of hearing testimony from members of the exchange and other interested persons.

It was said the committee would also give serious thought to the inclusion on the board of governors of a small group of outsiders having full powers to function as representatives of the public. The committee's report is expected to be ready the first week in February.

Officials Shift Voucher Theft Responsibility

Blame Tossed Back and Forth by Interior and War Departments.

By the United Press.

Responsibility for conditions that enabled a voucher clerk to mulct the Government of $87,000 was tossed back and forth by the War and Interior Departments yesterday at the Senate Public Lands Committee's hearing on qualifications of Ebert K. Burlew to be Assistant Secretary of the Interior.

Testimony of Maj. Gen. Walter L. Reed, inspector general of the Army, brought out it was easy for Reno Stiteley, the clerk, to forge and cash vouchers because the two Government offices had no system of checkmating him. Conversely, others could have piled up defalcations without being discovered.

assistant to Interior Secretary

Reed said Stitely possessed forged authorizations to present and receive payment for vouchers, but that there was nothing to make anyone suspicious. He denied testimony of Park Service and other Interior Department officials that Stitely carried on his peculations through creation of imaginary Civilian Conservation Corps camps. The clerk used "ghost" employes—nonexistent persons—who he "assigned" to CCC camps in the Shenandoah Valley, it was said.

Names All Forged.

Names of Ickes and other officials, forged, were on the vouchers, Reed said, so the Army disbursing officer had no reason to be suspicious, and therefore made no attempt to check the vouchers against the payees. He pointed out that of Stiteley's defalcations, only $50,000 was obtained through the disbursing officer. The remainder came from Park Service funds.

He said it was not "incumbent" upon the disbursing officer to investigate whether the payees actually were employed by the CCC.

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming, charged the Army took a "short cut" in the method prescribed by President Roosevelt for disbursing CCC funds.

Submitted Vouchers.

Maj. Philip Brown, an Army investigator, told the committee CCC Director Robert Fechner had suggested the method of payment, and said the Army submitted a compilation of vouchers paid to the Interior Department, including two filed by Stiteley, for justification. He later offered a report from Interior investigators, signed by Special Agent Robert C. McCarthy, saying it was "inconceivable" the National Park Service would authorize any person to receive checks from the disbursing officer to deliver to persons named on the vouchers.

The report also charged records in the Park Service's Washington office "have not been audited in several years" and neither has a proper audit of emergency conservation funds been made in the Washington office of the National Park Service or its numerous field stations."

Clouds and Cold To Remain Today; Whole East Chills

Winter clamped its icy grip along much of the Eastern seaboard yesterday, driving temperature in the District to 24 by 10 p. m. as the Weather Bureau predicted a reading of 22 before dawn today. Slight snow flurries came from overcast skies yesterday afternoon.

Continued cold and cloudiness were predicted for Washington today. The forecaster added that tomorrow will see either snow or rain. Yesterday's maximum was 30, recorded at 8 a. m.

Upstate New York shivered in the coldest weather of the season, and in New England temperatures in many places dropped to the lowest in more than two years. Montpelier, Vt., reported a minimum of 30 below, according to the Associated Press.

Because of storms and ice jams, several boats were in distress. The Coast Guard cutter Calypso went to aid the American freighter Camor, aground off Pooles Island in Chesapeake Bay.

In the middle of Newburgh Bay, in the Hudson River, the ferryboat Dutchess was marooned by an ice jam with 20 passengers aboard.

Guards at Lorton Get Drastic Tests To Prove Fitness

Guards at Lorton Reformatory must run the 50-yard dash, with regular clothing, 4 times within 15 minutes, each dash not more than 6 seconds, before assignment, according to a statement released yesterday by General Superintendent Ray L. Huff.

Physical tests for guards is part of the new In-Service Training put in effect September 28, 1937, by Superintendent Huff.

Another requirement is to lift a 100-pound sack from the ground to a rack above head 4 times within 10 minutes.

"Appointments are made conditional on satisfactory service and progress in In-Service Training work," Huff stated.

After 8 weeks of schooling, examinations must be taken by all probationary appointees before permanent appointment.

The program follows:

End of

2d week—Examination in rules for inmates.

3d week—Description of regular posts and duties of reservation. Repeat of physical tests.

4th week—Rules and regulations on the use of property.

5th week—Repeat physical tests and qualify with pistol.

Armed Bandits Use Pop Bottle To 'Pop' Victim

Jack Bailey, 30, Allentown, Md., merchant, told Prince Georges County police yesterday a pair of colored men, one of them armed with a pistol, walked into his store and ordered him to stick up his hands and hand over his money.

When the men stepped up to the counter Bailey said he aimed a punch at one of his assailants, but the other popped him with a pop bottle. When he recovered from the effects of the blow, Bailey said, the men had fled.

Relates How U. S. Was Defrauded

Maj. Gen. Walter L. Reed, inspector general of the Army, told the Senate Public Lands Committee yesterday a disbursement official's reliance on "forged" signatures enabled Reno Stitely, former chief voucher clerk in the Interior Department, to embezzle $87,000 in emergency funds in three years.

Greenbelt's 1st Bridal Shower Lasts 12 Hours

Whole Town Turns Out to Welcome Jacobsens to New Home.

"Announcing a kitchen shower for the bride, Mrs. Jacobsen. Go any time during the day. Let's get acquainted."

This note, tacked on the community bulletin board at the grocery store, heralded arrival of the first newlyweds to select Greenbelt as a place to start housekeeping.

Also, it may have set a new style in bridal showers—up to now affairs which lasted only a few hours.

Mrs. Robert E. Jacobsen, the bride, did not keep a list of callers but she thinks every Greenbelt family was represented during the 12 hours open to them by the public announcement.

"They kept on coming, right up to 6:15. We had a marvelous time," she declared last night as she stored away presents and termed her first day in a planned city "a huge success."

Jacobsen, first Greenbelt bridegroom, is assistant manager of Greenbelt Consumer Services, Inc., which operates all the town's commercial enterprises.

He came to Greenbelt several weeks ago, selected an apartmnt and helped get the grocery store under way. Then he returned to Minneapolis for the wedding.

Mrs. Jacobsen was Miss Marna Leland, teacher of physical education in a Minneapolis high school. Later on she may start a dancing class in the model town.

Jacobsen, who attended the University of Minnesota, formerly managed a grocery store for his father. This is his first venture in co-operatives, although he has been interested in them for years.

He considers the Greenbelt opportunity "just what I have been wanting," and believes the world is going to learn much about co-operatives from the Greenbelt venture.

The couple will have specially made Greenbelt furniture in their home, which Mrs. Jacobsen thinks is "remarkably well designed and arranged."

Bob Burns Says—

Lots of people don't seem to understand why I am building a log cabin back in the hills. It's jest because I was brought up in a quiet place and noise seems to git on my nerves. It's all accordin' to what a fella is used to.

I remember a city man that come down home one winter and one day he went to Papa and said "I'm going back to the city—I can't sand the quietness around here." Papa says "Well, if it's noise you're lookin' for—stick around a couple of months—the frogs oughta be croakin' down at the pond by then."

Japan Recalls Envoy to China; Backs Peiping

Brands Government of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek a Local Regime.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Jan. 18.—The Japanese Ambassador to China was called home today as indications increased that Japan eventually would recognize the new Peiping regime as the government of China.

The recall of Ambassador Shigeru Kawagoe from Shanghai set the seal on the repudiation of the Chinese government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek made in the Japanese government's statement last Sunday.

Akira Kazami, chief secretary of the Japanese cabinet, asserted this declaration was stronger than a declaration of war. He said Japan considered Chiang's government only a local regime and did not intend to recognize it as the government of China bya declaration of war.

Chinese Failed to Reply.

A foreign office spokesman said German Ambassador Herbert von Dirksen had informed the Japanese government early in December that the Chinese government was ready to discuss peace terms and that Germany was willing to initiate direct negotiations.

The Japanese government accepted the offer, the spokesman said, but the Chinese did not reply.

"This was the last opportunity offered the Chinese government for reconsideration," he asserted.

Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye said in an interview with the Japanese press that the government was determined that the Peiping regime, created under protection of the Japanese army, should grow and cooperate with Japan for "peace and culture in the Orient."

Chinese Set Decoys To Draw Foes' Bombs

Nanchang, China, Jan. 18 (AP).—An American aviation mechanic told today how Japanese bombers have been destroying so many "Chinese planes" lately.

"They're keeping a Chinese carpenter busy at the airdrome making wooden dummy planes," he said. "The Chinese go out at night and put them in fields that look like airfields, then the Japanese come along the next day and blow them up."

Chicago Bans Film Exposing Situation Under Hitler's Rule

New York, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Time, Inc., tonight said the Chicago Board of Censors has banned the showing of the latest March of Time newsreel, "Inside Nazi Germany, 1938."

Earlier today Dr. Jans Borchers, German consul-general here, denied his office had sought elimination of some scenes.

Time, Inc., said that the Chicago ban was on the grounds that the film is unfriendly to the German government. The ban will be appealed.

Protestant Preacher Faces Nazi Trial Feb. 7

Berlin, Jan. 18 (AP).—A district court today set February 7 as date for the trial of the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, Protestant leader in the fight against Nazi government regulation of church affairs.

Niemoeller has been in jail since July 1. He was offered his freedom if he would agree to quit preaching, but he insisted upon a trial.

A Cleopatra in Modern Dress

Lovely 16-year-old Farida Zulficar, who will become Queen of Egypt tomorrow when she is married to 17-year-old King Farouk, is pictured in the twentieth century costume she loves to wear, though tradition will compel her to remain veiled in public. Her trousseau cost $25,000.

All Egypt Awaiting Wedding Of 2d Queen Since Cleopatra

16-Year-Old Girl Who Will Become Bride of Farouk Maintains Sphinx-Like Calm on Eve of Sumptuous Ceremony.

By the Associated Press.

Cairo, Egypt, Jan. 18.—Slender, dark-eyed Farida Zulficar, who will become Egypt's second queen since Cleopatra on Thursday, completed her prenuptial arrangements today with sphinx-like calm.

placidly had her 45-gown trousseau placidly had her 45-gown trousseau packed and sent to Koubbeh Palace, where she and young King Farouk will live after their marriage.

From the time of Cleopatra, who was the country's ruler when Egypt passed under the domination of Rome in 31 B. C., there was no Queen of Egypt until Farouk's mother gained the title when her late husband, Fuad, was proclaimed king in 1922.

The impending ceremony will be Egypt's first royal wedding since the days of the Pharaohs, for Fuad already had been married to Queen Nazli when he became king.

Meanwhile, 17-year-old Farouk received foreign diplomats bearing presents. Among diplomats paying their respects was Sir Miles Lampson, British Ambassador, who brought a letter of congratulations from King George.

Farida is the daughter of a judge of the Alexandria mixed court of appeal. Her parents named her Sasi Naz, which in Persian means "pure rose," but at home they called her Fauvette ("warbler.")

Farouk, by royal decree, changed his sweetheart's name to Farida, meaning "peerless."

She said "ca va" (all right) when Farouk proposed to her.

Although she is as modern as her bridegroom, she won't use powder or lipstick. She may have to be veiled in public and stay home when Farouk goes to official parties, but she revels in her smart clothes and has plenty of them.

Her $25,000 trousseau includes one "Arabian Nights" model, a rose-peach garment embroidered with water-drop pearls with a 24-foot lame train spangled with jewels and trimmed with blue velvet and ermine. It has a brocade design of lotus foliage and a quarter-moon inscribed in gold with a verse of the Koran. The train alone cost $3,000.

Seven palaces are available to Farouk and his prospective bride.

A national holiday has been proclaimed for the marriage, and government railways cut fares 70 per cent to enable more celebrants to visit Cairo for the occasion. Public buildings and monuments will be specially lighted.

24 Brazilian Fascists Held After Gun Battle

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 18 (AP).—Police today held 22 men and two women, former members of the Integralistas, Fascist organization dissolved as a political group by President Getulio Vargas, after a clash in which more than 150 shots were fired.

Police found a cache of arms in the Campo Grande suburbs of Rio de Janeiro, where the fight occurred.

Plea of Windsor Frees Diplomat Jailed by Spain

London, Jan. 18 (AP).—A story in the London Daily Mail today told how the Duke of Windsor intervened with the government in Spain to have a Spanish diplomat released from a Madrid jail.

The incident came to light, according to the newspaper, when Sir Henry Chilton, British Ambassador to Spain, lost his wallet in a London movie yesterday. It contained a letter from the former British monarch asking him to try to obtain the release of Don Xavier de Bermejillo.

Don Bermejillo became a friend of the duke while attached to the Spanish embassy in London. Windsor, learning he was interned in Madrid, feared for his life and requested Chilton to see what could be done. Chilton said Bermejillo's release was effected with the cooperation of the Spanish government.

Wilson High Athlete Sought; Was Injured in Game Last Fall

Boy, 17, Vanishes After Taking Girl Home From Party.

Police along the Atlantic seaboard yesterday were asked to search for Truman W. Cole, 17-year-old Woodrow Wilson High School athlete and son of Dr. Truman W. Cole, assistant chief of the field division of the Bureau of Animal Husbandry, who has been missing from his home, 4620 Hunt avenue, Chevy Chase, Md., since Sunday night.

Dr. Cole told authorities his son had been hurt while playing right tackle for his team last fall in a game with the Landon School. He remained on the squad as a substitute lineman the rest of the season, but played only a few minutes against Anacostia High.

The injury seemed to interfere with his son's concentration, Dr. Cole said. He added he believed the youth might be headed toward their former home in Jacksonville, Fla., where he had been active in Boy Scout work, a patrol leader and Eagle Scout.

Sunday night Truman went to a birthday party given at the home of W. W. Barto, 1301 Longfellow street. The party was being given in honor of Miss Betty Jane Barto, a classmate of Truman's. After the party he took Miss Marjorie Hale, another classmate, to her home at North Capitol street and Michigan avenue, and disappeared.

Envoy's Recall Fails to Alter U.S. War Policy

Demand Voiced at Capitol for Invocation of Neutrality Act.

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt yesterday indicated the United States contemplated no immediate change in its attitude toward the Sino-Japanese hostilities as a result of Japan's withdrawal of its ambassador from China.

He reiterated at his press conference, however, that this Government's policy was on a 24-hour basis.

In response to questions about Japan's action, Mr. Roosevelt said the State Department had advised him it did not constitute severence of diplomatic relations. He has refrained from invoking the neutrality act against China and Japan in the past on the grounds they had not declared war or broken relations.

Charges Naval Alliance.

In the House, Representative Sauthoff (Progressive), Wisconsin, urging this country to "mind its own business," asked if the United States was forming a "naval alliance with Great Britain in Chinese waters."

"Is it a far-fetched conjecture to say that we are being jockeyed into a naval alliance with Great Britain in Chinese waters?" Sauthoff inquired in a speech. 'If so, our people should know it and if its is not so, then what are we doing there?"

He called attention to proposed participation by American cruisers in the opening of Britain's new Singapore naval docks February 14, and accused both France and Great Britain of "treachery and deceit."

Want Act Invoked.

Japan's withdrawal of its Ambassador drew renewed demands from leaders of the neutrality bloc in Congress that the President invoke the neutrality act. Senators Clark (Democrat), Missouri, and Nye (Republican), North Dakota, said they regarded the withdrawal as tantamount to the formal declaration of war which Japan chose to withhold.

Senator La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, said he believed the Japanese action "removed one more shred of the palpable fiction that that there isn't any war in China."

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), Nevada, of the Foreign Relations Committee said he could see no reason for the Foreign Relations Committee to begin a study of the matter, a course suggested by Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, supporter of the neutrality act, and Senator Johnson (Republican), California, opponent.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dorothy Hodgkin Dorsey presents Bidu Sayao in a song recital Tuesday night in Constitution Hall with Pavel Ulanovski as accompanist. Program: Amarilli (Caccini), Spiagge amate (Gluck), Chanson du Papillon (Campra), Deh vieni non tardar (Mozart), La Pastorella (Rossini), Le Rossignol et la Rose (Saint-Saens), Caro nome (Verdi), Addio del passato (Verdi), Profitons bien de la jeunesse (Massenet), Si tu le veux (Koechlin), Love Has Eyes (Bishop), A Dream (Bartlett), The Cuckoo (Lehmann), Aimant la rose le rossignol (Rimski-Korsakov), A Casinha Pequenina (Braga), Jota (De Falla), Polo (Nin).

It the patrons who had long ago reserved their places to hear Gina Cigna last evening were disappointed because illness prevented the dramatic soprano from appearing, they allowed no trace of that feeling to diminish the enthusiasm with which they applauded the performance of Bidu Sayao, who substituted for her Metropolitan Opera colleague. What they may have missed in the way of powerful tone and emotional fervor was compensated for by some of the most exquisite singing that has been heard in Constitutional Hall.

The recital was a model of restraint in artistry, of refinement in intonation, and of lyric charm. Not once did Mme. Sayao essay to exceed the natural limitations of her voice, not once did she force a tone for the sake of brilliance. Even in the Verdian arias which tempt a soprano to display every resource of breath and vocal agility, she refrained from an exaggeration. Her technical skill was completely concentrated upon the conservation of a pure quality of tone.

One so frequently hears a lyric voice flawed and distorted by forcing it beyond its emotional contour that one was delighted by so admirable an exemplar of the opposite procedure. Mme. Sayao's lyricism was limpid in tonal purity, free in its fluent ease, and graceful in phrasing. Only in her topmost notes was there any evidence of effort and that effort was without raucous strain.

It was apparent in her delicate reading of her first song, Giulio Caccini's lovely solo madrigal "Amarilli," that artistic finesse was to be the order of the evening. Thereafter one awaited with a little trepidation the arrival of the operatic arias, apprehensive lest the translucent freshness of the voice might be subjected to dramatic violence. But that fear was wasted, for the urgency of emotion was expressed entirely in color and not in undue dynamics.

Because of this economy the voice was as crystalline at the close of the recital as at the beginning. It had not been wearied by willful display, but had been controlled and guided by a sure judgment and an excellent taste.

Nazis Seeking Soviet Alliance, Dodd Declares

Constant Attacks Aimed at Forcing Recruit for the Fascit Ring, He Says.

The German government, by its constant attacks on Russia and communism, is attempting to force the Soviet into an alliance with Italy, the Reich and—Japan," Dr. William E. Dodd, Nazi-hating former Ambassador to Germany, said last night.

"The constant attacks on Russia and the encouragement of antagonism between Germany and the Soviet by Nazi officials," he declared, "are intended to force Russia to ally herself with the Fascist powers."

In his speech at the Town Hall here next Sunday, he said he would take up the "general picture" of the world international, political and economic situation today. Dr. Dodd asserted that he expects to devote about a third of his address to the economic set-up here and the remaining two-thirds to the political and economic outlook in Europe and Asia.

Asked about the recent diplomatic protest lodged by German Ambassador Hans Dieckhoff at the State Department against his remarks in New York several days ago, Dr. Dodd said, with obvious disgust in his voice, "He's only trying to please Hitler, and has protested on another occasion my remarks in an interview which never took place."

The former Ambassador to Germany said that Dieckhoff had "some master to please," and added that he had experienced "practically no reaction" when informed of Dieckhoff's call on Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

Irish Ask Britain To Aid Ulster Plan

London, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Irish delegates to the Anglo-Irish "peace talks" tonight urged Britain to approach the Ulster government and explain their demands for an all-Ireland republic.

The delegates of the former Irish Free State led by Eamon de Valera saved the negotiations from collapse by agreeing temporarily to shelve their Irish union demands. They discussed defense, trade and land annuities, aiming toward conclusion of a "slate-wiping" pact to end the five-year trade war between Ireland and Britain.

Moorish Riders Cut Down 3,000 In Teruel Raid

Moroccans Seize Steel and Concrete Forts Outside City.

By the United Press.

Saragozza, Spain, Jan. 18.—Moroccan cavalry conquered the heights of Alto de Muelton tonight and advanced to within a mile of Teruel, seizing the loyalists' steel and concrete fortifications outside the city and leaving 3,000 enemy dead on the slopes, nationalist headquarters announced.

The Moors, leading the nationalist troops up the mountain sides on Teruel's northern outskirts, killed hundreds of Senegalese soldiers.

Generalissimo Franco's general staff said the ruins of Teruel were untenable as nationlist troops continued to clip off highways on the north, west and south of the city.

The assault on the city caught the loyalists by surprise and was believed to have taken a toll of close to 5,000 lives.

The taking of the heights was described as breaking the backbone of the loyalist resistance on the southern Aragon front. The mountain peaks, some of which are 3,000 feet high, are along the southern end of the loyalist defense line running north to Alfambra, 16 miles north of Teruel.

More than 800 prisoners were taken.

Russians to Stop Party Expulsions

Moscow, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Communist Party's central committee tonight called a virtual halt in the purge of party ranks by a stern resolution condemning the mass expulsion of party members, which usually resulted in their loss of jobs and often arrest.

The committee forbade mass expulsions, which it blamed either on over-ambitious informers or officials too anxious to get ahead. The resolution disclosed that thousands had been driven from party ranks.
